Bifh. Ely. But how my Lord shall we refift it now? Bish. Cant. It mult be thought on: if it passe against vs, We loofe the better halfe of our Possession: For all the Temporali Lands, which men deuout By Testament have given to the Church, Would they strip from vs; being valu'd thus, As much as would maintaine, to the Kings honor, Full fifteene Earles, and fifteene hundred Knights, Six thousand and two hundred good Esquires: And to teliefe of Lazars, and weake age Of indigent faint Soules, past corporali toyle, A hundred Almes-howles, right well supply'd: And to the Coffers of the King belide, A thousand pounds by th'yeere Thus runs the Bill. Bilb. Els. This would drivke deepe. Bish. Cant Twould drinke the Cup and all. Bilb. Lty. But what prevention?

Bift. Cant. The King is full of grace, and faire regard.

Bish. Ely. And a true lover of the holy Church.

Bish Cant. The courses of his youth promis'd it not.
The breath no tooner lest his Fathers body,
But that his wildnesse, mortify'd in him,
Seem'd to dye too: yea, at that very moment,
Consideration like an Angell came,
And whipt th'offending Adam out of him;
Leaving his body as a Paradise,
T'inuclop and containe Celestials Spirits.
Neuer was such a sodame Scholler made:
Neuer came Resormation in a Flood,
With such a heady currance scowring saults:
Nor neuer Hidra-headed Wilsulnesse
So soone did loose his Seat; and all at once;
As in this King.

Bilb Ely. We are bleffed in the Change.

Bilb. Cant Heare him but reason in Diumitie;

Heare him debate of Common-wealth Assaires;
You would say, it hath been all in all his study:
List his discourse of Warre; and you shall heare
A searefull Battaile rendred you in Musque.

The Gordine Knot of it he will value of,
Familiar as his Gaster: that when he speakes,
The Ayre, a Charter'd Libertine, is still,
And the mute Wonder lucketh in mens eares,
To feale his sweet and honyed Sentences:
So that the Art and Practique part of Life,
Must be the Mistresse to this Theorique.
Which is a wonder how his Grace should gleane it,
Since his addiction was to Courses vaine,
His Companies valetter'd, sude, and shallow,
His Houres sill'd vp with Ryots Banquets, Sports;
And neuer noted in him any studie,
Any retyrement, any sequestration,
From open Haunts and Populatitic.

B. Ety. The Strawberry growes underneath the Nettle, And holesome Berryes thrine and ripen best, Neighbour'd by Fruit of baser qualitie:
And so the Prince obscur'd his Contemplation
Vinder the Veyle of Wildnesse, which (no doubt)
Grew like the Summer Grasse, fastest by Night,
Viscene, yet cressive in his facultie.

B.Cant. It must be so; for Miracles are ceast:
And therefore we must needes admit the meanes,
How things are perfected.

B. Ely. But my good Lord:
How now for mittigation of this Bill,
Vrg'd by the Commons? doth his Majefic
Incline to it, or no?

B. Cant. He feemes indifferent:
Or vather swaying more upon our part.
Then cherishing th'exhibiters against ve:
For I have made an offer to his Mateslie,
Vpon our Spirituals Convocation,
And in regard of Causes now in hand,
Which I have open'd to his Grace at large,
As touching France, to give a greater Summe,
Then ever at one time the Clergie yet
Did to his Predecessors part withals.

B. Ely. How did this offer feeme received, my Lord?

B. Cant. With good acceptance of his Maiellie:

Saue that there was not time enough to heare,

As I perceived his Grace would faine have done,

The feveralls and vihilden paffages

Of his true Titles to fome certaine Dukedomes,

And generally, to the Crown and Seat of France,

Derived from Edward, his great Grandfather.

B. Ely. What was the impediment that broke this off?

B. Cant. The French Embaffador upon that inflant

Craved audience; and the howre I thinke is come,

To give him hearing: Is it foure a Clock?

B. Ely. It is.

B. Cant. Then goe we in, to know his Embassie: Which I could with a ready guesse declare, Before the Frenchman speake a word of it.

B.Caur. God and his Augels guard your facred Throne, And make you long become it. Kmg. Sure we thanke you. My learned Lord, we pray you to proceed, And iustly and religiously vnfold, Why the Law Salike, that they have in France, Or should or should not barre vs in our Clayme: And God forbid, my deare and faithfull Lord. That you should fashion, wrest, or bow your reading, Or nicely charge your understanding Soule, With opening Titles miscreate, whose right Suces not in native colours with the truth: For God doth know, how many now in health, Shall drop their blood, in approbation Of what your reuerence shall incite vs to. Therefore take heed how you impawne our Perfon, How you awake our fleeping Sword of Warre; We charge you in the Name of God take heed: For never two tuch Kingdomes did contend Without much fall of blood, whose guiltlesse drops Are enery one, a Woe, a fore Complaint, 'Gainst him, whose wrongs gives edge vnto the Swords, That makes such waste in briefe mortalitie. Vnder this Conjuration, speake my Lord: For we will heare, note, and believe in heart, That what you speake, is in your Conscience wallit, As pure as finne with Baptisme. B. Can. Then heare me gracious Soueraign, & vou Peers, That owe your felues, your lives, and fecuces, To this Imperiall Throne. There is no barre Tomake against your Highnesse Clayme to France, But this which they produce from Pharamond, Interram Salicim I. I. l.er. s no succedaul, No Woman fhall forceed in Salike Land: Which Salike Land, the Ecench vinuffly gloze To be the Recline of France, and Pharamond The founder of this Law, and Fe nale Barre. Yet their owne Ambors faithfully affirme, That the Land Suike is in Germanie Betweene the Frouds of Sala and of Elne: Where Charles the Great hanng fubdu'd the Saxons, There lest behind and iettled certaine French: Who holding in disdaine the German Women, For some dishonest manners of their life, Establisht then this Law; to wit, No Female Should be inheritrix in Salike Land: Which Salike (as I faid) twist Elucand Sala, Is at this day in Germanie, call'd Meisen. Then doth it well appeare, the Salike Law Was not devised for the Realme of France: Nor did the French possesse the Salike Land, Vntill foure hundred one and twentic yeeres After defunction of King Pharamond, Idly suppos'd the founder of this Law Who died within the yeere of our Redemption, Foure hundred twentie six: and Charles the Great Subdu'd the Saxons, and did feat the Prench Beyond the River Sala, in the yeere Eight hundred fine, Besides, their Writers say, King Pepin, which deposed Childerike, Did as Heire Generall, being descended Of Blithild, which was Daughter to King Clethair, Make Clayme and Title to the Crowne of France. Hugh Capet also, who vsurpt the Crowne Of Of Charles the Duke of Loraine, sole Heire male Of the true Line and Stock of Charles the Great: To find his Title with some shewes of truth, Though in pure truth it was corrupt and naught, Conucy'd himfelfe as th'Heire to th' Lady Lingare, Daughter to Charlemaine, who was the Sonne To Lewes the Emperour, and Lewes the Sonne Of Charles the Great; also King Lewes the Tenth, Who was sole Heire to the Viurper Caper, Could not keepe quiet in his confcience, Wearing the Crowne of France, till fatisfied, That faire Queene Isabel, his Grandmother, Was Lineall of the Lady Ermongare Daughter to Charles the foresaid Duke of Loraine: By the which Marriage, the Lync of Charles the Great Was re-vnited to the Crowne of France. So, that as cleare as is the Summers Simile, King Pepins Title, and Hugh Capers Clayme, King Gewes his fatisfaction, all appeare To hold in Right and Title of the Female: So doe the Kings of France vnto this day. Howbert, they would hold up this Salique Law, To barre your Highnesse clayming from the Female, And rather chute to hide them in a Nee, Then amply to imbarre their crooked Titles, Vfurpt from you and your Progenitors. King. May I with right and confeience make this claim? Bilb. Cant. The finne vpon my head, dread Soueraigne: For in the Booke of Numbers is it writ, When the man dyes, let the Inheritance Descend voto the Daughter. Gracious Lord, Stand for your owne, vinwind your bloody Flagge, Looke back into your mightie Ancestors Goe my dread Lord, to your great Grandfires Tombe, From whom you clayme; inuoke his Warlike Spirit, And your Great Vnckles, Edward the Black Prince, Who on the French ground play'd a Tragedie, Making defeat on the full Power of France: Whiles his most mightie Father on a Hill Stood fmiling, to behold his Lyons Whelpe Forrage in blood of French Nobilitie. O Noble English, that could entertaine With halfe their Forces, the full pride of France,

Bilb: Awake remembrance of these valiant dead, And with your purssant Arme renew their Feats; You are their Henre, you sit vpon their Throne: The Blood and Courage that renowned them, Runs in your Veines: and my thrice-puissant Liege Is in the very May-Morne of his Youth, Ripe for Exploits and mightic Enterprises.

And let another halfe stand laughing by,

All out of worke, and cold for action.

Exe. Your Brother Kings and Monarchs of the Earth Doe all expect, that you should rowie your selfe, As did the former Lyons of your Blood. (might; West. They know your Grace hath cause, and means, and So hath your Highnesse: neuer King of England Had Nobles richer, and more loyall subjects, Whose hearts haue lest their bodyes here in England, And lye pauillion'd in the fields of France.

Bish. Can. O let their bodyes follow my deare Liege With Bloods, and Sword and Fire, to win your Right: In ay de whereor, we of the Spiritualtie Will rayse your Highnesse such a mightie Summe, As neuer did the Clergie at one time Bring in to any of your Ancestors.

King. We must not onely arms t'inuade the French, But lay downs our proportions, to defend Against the Scot, who will make roade vpon vs., With all aduancages.

Bib. Cov. They of those Marches, gracious Soueraign, Shall be a Wall sufficient to defend Our in-land from the piltering Borderers.

King. We do not meane the courfing inatchers onely, But feare the maine inrendment of the Scot, Who hath been still a giddy neighbour to vs: Fo you shall reade, that my great Grandfather Neuce went with his forces into France, But that the Scot, on his vufurnisht Kungdome. Come pouring like the Tyde into a breach, With ample and brim fulneffe of his force, Calling the gleaned Land with hot Aflayes, Girding with grieuous fiege, Castles and Townes: Thit England being emptie of defence, Hath shooke and trembled at th'ill neighbourhood. B. Can. She hath bin the more fear'd the harm'd, my Lieg 2: For heare her but exampl'd by her felfe, When all her Cheualrie hath been in France, And thee a mourning Widdow of her Nobles, Shee hath her selfe not onely well defended, But taken and impounded as a Stray The King of Scots: whom shee did send to France, To fill King Edwards fame with prisoner Kings, And make their Chronicle as rich with prayle, As is the Owfe and bottome of the Sea With funken Wrack, and fum-lefte Treasuries. Bifb. Ely. But there's a faying very old and true, If that you will France was, then with Scotland first begin. For once the Eagle (England) being in prey, To her vinguarded Nell, the Weazell (Scot) Comes fneaking, and to fucks her Princely Egges, Playing the Mouse in absence of the Cat, To tame and hauocke more then the can eate.

Exet. It follows theu, the Cat must stay at home, Yet that is but a crush'd necessity,
Since we have lockes to safegard necessaries,
And pretty traps to catch the petty theeves.
While that the Armed hand doth fight abroad,
Th'adusted head defends it selse at home:
For Government, though high, and low, and lower,
Put into parts, doth keepe in one consent,
Congreeing in a suil and natural close,

Like Musicke. Cant. Therefore doth heaven divide The flace of man in divers functions, Setting endenour in continual motion: To which is fixed as an agine or butt, Obedience: for so worke the Hony Bees, Creatures that by a rule in Nature teach The Act of Order to a peopled Kingdome. They have a King, and Officers of forts, Where so ne like Magistrates correct at home: Others, like Merchants venter Trade abroad-Others, like Souldiers armed in their flings, Make boote vpon the Summers Veluer buddes: Which pillage, they with merry march bring home To the Tent-royal of their Emperor: Who busied in his Maiesties surveyes The finging Malons building roofes of Gold, The civil Citizens kneading vp the hony; The poore Mechanicke Porters, crowding in Their heavy burthens at his narrow gate:

Therefore to France, my Liege, Divide your happy England into foure, Whereof, take you one quarter into France, And you withall shall make all Gallia shake. If we with thrice fuch powers left at home, Cannot defend our owne doores from the dogge, Let vs be worried, and our Nation lose The name of hardinesse and policie.

King. Call in the Messengers sent from the Dolphin.

Now are we well resolu'd, and by Gods helpe
And yours, the noble sinewes of our power,
France being ours, wee'l bend it to our Awe,
Or breake it all to peeces. Or there wee'l fit, (Ruling in large and ample Emperic,
Ore France, and all her (almost) Kingly Dukedomes)
Or lay these bones in an vinworthy Vrne,
Tomblesse, with no remembrance ouer tham:
Either our History shall with full mouth
Speake freely of our Acts, or else our graue
Like Turkish mute, shall have a tonguelesse mouth,
Not worthipt with a waxen Epitaph.

Enter Ambassadors of France.

Now are we well prepar'd to know the pleasure
Of our faire Cosin Dolphin: for we heare,
Your greeting is from him, not from the King.

Amb. May't please your Maiestie to give vs leave Freely to render what we have in charge: Or shall we sparingly shew you farre off The Dolphins meaning, and our Embassie.

King. We are no Tyrant, but a Christian King, Vnto whose grace our passion is as subject As is our wretches settred in our prisons, Therefore with franke and with vncurbed plainnesse, Tell vs the Dolphins minde.

Amb. Thus than in few:
Your Highnesse lately sending into France,
Did claime some certaine Dukedomes, in the right
Of your great Predecessor, King Edward the third.
In answer of which claime, the Prince our Master
Sayes, that you sauour too much of your youth,
And bids you be aduis'd: There's nought in France,
That can be with a nimble Galliard wonne:
You cannot reuell into Dukedomes there.
He therefore sends you meeter for your spirit
This Tun of Treasure; and in lieu of this,
Desires you let the dukedomes that you claime
Heare no more of you. This the Dolphin speakes.

Knig. What Treasure Vncle? Exe. Tennis balles, my Liege.

Kin, We are glad the Dolphin is so pleasant with vs, His Present, and your paines we thanke you for: When we have matcht our Rackets to these Balles, We will in France (by Gods grace) play a set, Shall strike his fathers Crowne into the hazard. Tell him, he hath made a match with such a Wrangler,

That all the Courts of France will be diffurb'd With Chaces. And we understand him well, How he comes o're vs with our wilder dayes, Not measuring what vie we made of them. We neuer valew'd this poore seate of England, And therefore living hence, did give our selfe To barbarous license: As 'tis cuer common, That men are merrieft, when they are from home. But tell the Dolphin, I will keepe my State, Be like a King, and shew my sayle of Greatnesse, When I do rowfe me in my Throne of France. For that I have layd by my Maiestie, And plodded like a man for working dayes: But I will rife there with fo full a glorie, That I will dazle all the eyes of France, Yea strike the Dolphin blinde to looke on vs, And tell the pleafant Prince, this Mocke of his Hath turn'd his balles to Gun-stones, and his soule Shall stand fore charged, for the wastefull vengeance That shall flye with them: for many a thousand widows Shall this his Mocke, mocke out of their deer hasbands, Mocke mothers from their fonnes, mock Castles downe: And some are yet ungotten and unborne, That shal have cause to curse the Dolphins scorne. But this Iyes all within the wil of God, To whom I do appeale, and in whose name Tel you the Delphin, I am comming on, To venge me as I may, and to put forth My rightfull hand in a wel-hallow'd caufe. So get you hence in peace: And tell the Dolphin, His Iest will facour but of shallow wit, When thousands weepe more then did laugh at it. Consey them with fafe condust. Fare you well. Exennt Ambassadors.

Exc. This was a merry Mcsage.

King. We hope to make the Sender blush at it:
Therefore, my Lords, omit no happy howic,
That may gue furth rance to our Expedition:
For we have now no thought in vs but France,
Saue those to God, that runne before our businesse.
Therefore let our proportions for these Warres
Be soone collected, and all things thought vpon,
That may with reasonable swistnesse adde
More Feathers to our Wings: for God before,
Wee'le chide this Dolphin at his fathers doore.
Therefore let every man now taske his thought,
That this faire Action may on foot be brought. Exenst.

King. Now fits the winde faire, and we will aboord.

My Lord of Cambridge, and my kinde Lord of Malbani,

And you my gentle Knight, give me your thoughts:

Thinke you not that the powres we beare with vs

Will cut their passage through the force of France?

Doing the execution, and the acte,

For which we have in head assembled them.

Scro. No doubt my Liege, if each man do his best.

King. I doubt not that, since we are well perswaded

We carry not a heart with vs from hence,

That growes not in a faire consent with ours:

Nor leave not one behinde, that doth not wish

Successe and Conquest to attend on vs.

Cam. Neuer was Monarch better feat'd and lou'd, Then is your Maiefly; there's not I thinke a subject That fits in heart-greefe and vineasinesse Vinder the sweet shade of your government.

Kni. True: those that were your fathers enemies, Haue steep'd their gauls in hony, and do serue you

With hearts create of duty, and of zeale.

King. We therefore hade great cause of thankfulnes,
And shall forget the office of our hand
Sooner then quittance of defect and merit,
According to the weight and worthinesse.

Scro. So service shall with steeled snewes toyle, And labour shall reiresh it selfe with hope To do your Grace incessant services.

King. We ludge no leffe. Viskle of Exeter, Inlarge the man committed yefterday, That rayl'd against our person: We consider It was excesse of Vine that set him on, And on his more admice, We pardon him.

Let him be puinfle'd Sourcingue, least example Breed (by his sufferance) more of such a kind.

King. Olet vs yet be mercifull

Cam. So may your Highnesse, and yet punish too.

Grey. Sir, you shew great mercy if you give him life,
After the taste of much correction.

King. Alas, your too much love and care of me, Are heavy Orisons gainst this poore wretch: If little faults proceeding on distemper, Shall not be wink'd at, how shall we firetch our eye When capitall crimes, chew'd, swallow'd, and digested, Appeare before vs? Wee'l yet inlarge that man, Though Cambridge, Scroope, and Gray, in their deere care And tender preservation of our person Wold have him punish'd. And now to our French causes, Who are the 'ate Commissioners?

Cam. I one my Lord, Your Highnesse bad me aske for it to day. Scro. So did you me my Liege.

Gray. And I my Royall Soueraigne.

King. Then Riehard Earle of Cambridge, there is yours:
There yours Lord Scroope of Masham, and Sir Knight:
Gray of Northumberland, this same is yours:
Reade them, and know I know your worthinesse.
My Lord of Westmerland, and Vinkle Exercer,
We will aboord to night. Why how now Gentlemen?
What see you in those papers, that you loose
So much complexion? Looke ye how they change:
I heir cheekes are paper. Why, what reade you there,
That have so cowarded and chac'd your blood
Out of apparance.

Cam. I do confesse my fault, And do submit me to your Highnesse meioy, Cray, Sero. To which we all appeale.

King. The mercy that was quicke in va but late, By your owne countaile is supprest and kill'd: You must not dare (for shame) to talke of mercy, For your owne reasons turne into your bosonies, As dogs vpon their mailters, worrying you: See you my Princes, and my Noble Peeres, Their highfh monfters: My Lord of Cambridge heere, You know how apt out loue was, to accord To furnish with all appertments Belonging to his Honour; and this man, Hath for a tew light Crownes, lightly confpir'd And swome voto the practises of France To kill vs heere in Hampton. To the which, This Knight no leffe for bounty bound to Vs Then Cambridge is, hath likewife fworne. But O, What shall I say to thee Lord Scroope, thou cinell, Ingratefull, fauage, and inhumane Creature? Thou that didff beare the key of all my countailes, That knew if the very bottome of my soule, That (almost) might'st have covid me into Golde, Would'A thou have practis'd on me, for thy vie? May it be possible, that for raigue hyer Could out of thee extract one sparke of cuill That might annoy my finger?'Tis fo ffrange, That though the truth of it stands off as grosse As blacke and white, my eye will scattely see it. Treason, and murther, euer kept together, As two yoake diuels fworne to eythers purpofe, Working to groffely in an naturall cause, That admiration did not hoope at them. But thou (gainst all proportion) didst bring in Wonder to waite on treason, and on murther: And whatfoeuer cunning fiend it was That wrought upon thee fo prepoferoully, Hath got the voyce in hell for excellence:

And

And other diuels that fuggest by treasons, Do botch and bungle vp damnation, With patches, colours, and with formes being fetcht From gliff'ring femblances of piety: But he that temper'd thee, bad thee stand vp, Gaue thee no inflance why thou shouldst do treason, Vnlesse to dub thee with the name of Traitor. If that same Dæmon that hath gull'd thee thus, Should with his Lyon-gate walke the whole world, He might returne to vallie Tartar backe, And tell the Legions, I can never win A foule fo eafie as that Englithmans. Oh, how hast thou with icalousie infected The iweeinesse of affiance? Shew men dutifull, Why so didst thou: seeme they grave and learned? Why so didst thou. Come they of Noble Family? Why fo didft thou. Seeme they religious? Why so didst thou. Or are they spare in diet, Free from groffe pilsion, or of mirth, or anger, Constant in spirit, not sweruing with the blood, Garnish'd and deck d in modest complement, Not working with the eye, without the eare. And but in purged indgement trusting neither, Such and so finely boulted didst thou seeme: And thus thy fall hath left a kinde of blor, To make thee full fraught man, and best indued With tome suspition, I will weepe for thee. For this revolt of thine, me thinkes is like Another fall of Man. Their faults are open, Arrest them to the answer of the Law, And God acquit them of their practifes.

Exe. I arrest thee of High Treason, by the name of Richard Earle of Cambridge .

I arrest thee of High Treason, by the name of Thomas Lord Scroope of Marsham.

I arrest thee of High Treason, by the name of Thomas

Grey, Knight of Northumberland.

Sero. Our purposes, God suffly hath discouer'd, And I repent my fault more then my death, Which I beseech your Highnesse to forgine, Although my body pay the price of it.

Cam. For me, the Gold of France did not seduce,! Although I did admit it as a motiue, The fooner to effect what I intended: But God be thanked for prevention, Which in sufferance heartily will reioyce, Befeeching God, and you, to pardon mee.

Gray. Neuer did faithfull subject more rejoyce At the discouery of most dangerous Treason, Then I do at this houre ioy ore my felfe, Prevented from a damned enterprize; My fault, but not my body, pardon Soueraigne.

King. God quit you in his mercy: Hear your fentence You have conspir'd against Our Royall person, Ioyn'd with an enemy proclaim'd, and from his Coffers, Receyu'd the Golden Earnest of Our death: Wherein you would have fold your King to flaughter, His Princes, and his Peeres to feruitude, His Subiects to oppression, and contempt, And his whole Kingdome into desolation: Touching our person, seeke we no revenge, But we our Kingdomes safety wust so tender, Whose ruine you sought, that to her Lawes We do deliver you. Get you therefore hence, (Poore miserable wretches) to your death: The taste whereof, God of his mercy give

You patience to indure, and true Repentance Of all your deare offences. Beare them hence. Exit. Now Lords for France: the enterprise whereof Shall be to you as vs, like glorious. We doubt not of a faire and luckie Warre, Since God to gracioully liath brought to light This dangerous Treason, lurking in our way, To hinder our beginnings. We doubt not now, But every Rubbe is smoothed on our way. Then forth, deare Countreymen: Let vs deliuer Our Puissance into the hand of God, Putting it straight in expedition. Chearely to Sea, the fignes of Warre aduance, No King of England, if not King of France. Enter Pistoll, Nim, Bardolph, Boy, and Hostesse.

Hostesse. Prythee honey sweet Husband, let me bring thee to Staines.

Psstoll. No: for my manly heart doth erne. Bardolph, be blythe: Nim, rowse thy vaunting Veines: Boy, brisle thy Courage vp: for Falfiaffe hee is dead, and wee must erne therefore,

Bard. Would I were with him, wherefomere hee is, eyther in Heauen, or in Hell.

Hostesse. Nay sure, hee's not in Hell: hee's in Arthurs Bolome, if euerman went to Arthurs Bolome: a made a finer end, and went away and it had beene any Christome Child: a parted eu'n sust betweene T welue and One, eu'n at the turning o'th Tyde: for after I faw him fumble with the Sheets, and play with Flowers, and smile vpon his fingers end, I knew there was but one way: for his Nofe was as sharpe as a Pen, and a Table of greene fields. How now Sir Iohn (quoth 13) what man? be a good cheare: so a cryed out, God, God, God, three or foure times: now I, to comfort him, bid him a should not thinke of God; I hop'd there was no neede to trouble himselse with any fuch thoughts yet: so a bad me lay more Clothes on his feet: I put my hand into the Bed, and felt them, and they were as cold as any stone: then I felt to his knees, and so vp-peer'd, and vpward, and all was as cold as any stone,

Nom. They say he cryed out of Sack.

Hostesse. I, that a did.

Bard. And of Women. Hostesse. Nay, that a did not.

Bey. Yes that a did, and faid they were Deules incar-

Woman. A could neuer abide Carnation, 'cwas a Colour he neuer lik'd.

Boy. A said once, the Deule would have him about

Hostesse. A did in some sort (indeed) handle Women: but then hee was rumatique, and talk'd of the Whore of Babylon.

Boy. Doe you not remember a saw a Flea sticke vpon Bardolphs Nose, and a said it was a blacke Soule burning

Bard. Well, the fuell is gone that maintain'd that fire: that's all the Riches I got in his seruice.

Nim. Shall wee shogg? the King will be gone from Pift. Come, let's away. My Loue, give me thy Lippes: Looke to my Chattels, and my Moueables: Let Sences rule: The world is, Pitch and pay: trust none: for Oathes are Strawes, mens Faiths are Wafer-Cakes, and hold-fast is the onely Dogge: My Ducke, therefore Camero bee thy Counsailor. Goe, cleare thy Chrystalls. Yoke. fellowes in Aimes, let vs to France, like Horse.

leeches my Boyes, to sucke, to sucke, the very blood to sucke.

Boy. And that's but vnwholesome sood, they say.
Pif. Touch her soft mouth, and march.

Bard. Farwell Hofteffe.

Now, I cannot kille, that is the humor of it: but adieu.

Pist. Let Huswiserie appeare: keepe close, I thee command.

Hoftesse. Farwell: adien.

Excunt

Enter the French King, the Delphin, the Dukes of Berry and Britaine.

And more then carefully it vs concernes,
And more then carefully it vs concernes,
To answer Royally in our desences.
Therefore the Dukes of Berry and of Britaine,
Of Brabant and of Orleance, shall make forth,
And you Prince Dolphin, with all swift dispatch
To lyne and new repayre our Townes of Warre
With men of courage, and with meanes defendant:
For England his approaches makes as sierce,
As Waters to the sucking of a Gulfe.
It sits vs then to be as prouident,
As seare may teach vs, out of late examples
Left by the satall and neglected English,
Vpon our fields.

Delphin. My most redoubted Father, It is most meet we arme vs 'gainst the Foe: For Peace it felfe should not so dull a Kingdome, (Though War nor no knowne Quarrel were in question) But that Defences, Musters, Preparations, Should be maintain d, affembled, and collected, As were a Warre in expectation. Therefore I fay, tis meet we all goe forth, To view the fick and feeble parts of France: And let vs doe it with no shew of feare, No, with no more, then if we heard that England Were busied with a Whitson Motris-dance: For,my good Liege, shee is so idly King'd, Her Scepter so phantastically borne, By a vaine giddie shallow humorous Youth, That feare attends her not.

Const. O peace, Prince Dolphin,
You are too much mistaken in this King:
Question your Grace the late Embassadors,
With what great State he heard their Embassie,
How well supply'd with Noble Councellors,
How modest in exception; and withall,
How terrible in constant resolution:
And you shall find, his Vanities fore-spent,
Were but the out-side of the Roman Brutus,
Couering Discretion with a Coat of Folly;
As Gardeners doe with Ordure hide those Roots
That shall first spring, and be most delicate.

Dolphin. Well, tis not fo, my Lord High Constable. But though we thinke it fo, it is no matter: In cases of defence, tis best to weigh The Enemie more mightie then he seemes, So the proportions of detence are fill'd: Which of a weake and niggardly projection, Doth like a Miser spoyle his Coat, with scanting A little Cloth.

King. Thinke we King Harry flrong:
And Princes, looke you flrongly arme to meet him.
The Kindred of him hath beene fleshs upon vs:

And he is bred out of that bloodie straine,
That haunted vs in our familiar Pathes:
Witnesse our too much memorable shame,
When Cressy Battell stally was strucke,
And all our Princes captin d, by the hand
Of that black Name, Edward, black Prince of Wales:
Whiles that his Mountaine Sire, on Mountaine standing
Vp in the Ayre, crown'd with the Golden Sunne,
Saw his Heroicall Seed, and smil'd to see him
Mangle the Worke of Nature, and deface
The Patternes, that by God and by French Fathers
Had twentie yeeres been made. This is a Stem
Of that Victorious Stock: and let vs feare
The Natine mightinesse and face of him.

Euter a Messenger.
Mess. Embassadors from Harry King of England,
Doe crave admittance to your Maicitie.

King. Weele give them present audience. Goe, and bring them.

You fee this Chase is hotly followed, friends.

Dolphin. Turne head, and stop pursuit; for coward Dogs Most spend their mouths, who what they seem to threaten Runs farre before them. Good my Soueraigne Take up the English short, and let them know Of what a Monarchie you are the Head: Selfe-loue, my Liege, is not so vile a sinne, As selfe-neglecting.

Enter Exeter.

King. From our Brother of England? Eve. From him, and thus he greets your Maiestie: He wills you in the Name of God Almightie, That you denest your felfe and lay apart The borrowed Glories, that by gift of Heauen, By Law of Nature, and of Nations, longs To him and to his Heires, namely the Crowne, And all wide-stretched Honors, that pertaine By Cult me, and the Ordinance of Times, Vito the Crowne of France, that you may know Fis no fin fler, nor no awk-ward Clayme, Picke from the worme-holes of long-vanishe dayes, Nor from the dust of old Oblision rake, He sends you this most memorable Lyne, In every Branch truly demonstrative; Willing you ouer-looke this Pedigree: And when you find him evenly deriv'd From his most fam'd, of famous Ancestors, Edward the third; he bids you then refigne Your Crowne and Kingdome, indirectly held From him, the Native and true Challenger.

King. Or else what followes?

Eve. Bloody conftraint: for if you hide the Crowne
Fuen in your hearts, there will he rake for it.
Therefore in fierce Tempest is he comming,
In Thunder and in Earth-quake, like a love:
That if requiring faile, he will compell.
And bids you, in the Bowels of the Lord,
Deliuer up the Crowne, and to take mercie
On the poore Soules, for whom this hungry Warre
Opens his vastie lawes: and on your head
Turning the Widdowes Teares, the Orphans Cryes,
The dead-mens Blood, the privy Maidens Groanes,
For Husbands, Fathers, and betrothed Louers,
That shall be swallowed in this Controverse.
This is his Clayme, his Threatning, and my Message:
Vnlesse the Dolphin be in presence here;
To whom expressely I bring greeting to.

King. For

King. For vs, we will confider of this further: To morrow shall you beare our full intent Back to our Brother of England. Delph. For the Dolphin,

I stand here for him: what to him from England?

Exe. Scorne and defiance, fleight regard, contempt, And any thing that may not mif-become
The mightie Sender, doth he prize you at.
Thus fayes my King: and if your Fathers Highnesse Doe not, in graunt of all demands at large,
Sweeten the bitter Mock you sent his Maiestie;
Hee'le call you to so hot an Answer of it,
That Caues and Wombie Vaultages of France
Shall chide your Trespas, and returne your Mock
In second Accent of his Ordinance.

Dolph. Say: if my Father render faire returne, It is against my will: for I desire Nothing but Oddes with England. To that end, as matching to his Youth and Vanitie, I did present him with the Paris-Balls.

Eve. Hee'le make your Paris Louer shake for it, Were it the Mistresse Court of mightie Europe: And be affur d, you'le find a dist'rence, As we his Subjects have in wonder found, Betweene the promise of his greener dayes, And there he masters now: now he weighes Time Euen to the vtmost Graine: that you shall reade in your owne Losses, if he stay in France.

King. To morrow shall you know our mind at full.

Exe. Dispatch vs with all speed, least that our King Come here himselfe to question our delay; For he is sooted in this Land already.

King. You shalbe soone dispatcht, with faire conditions. A Night is but small breathe, and little pawse,

To answer matters of this consequence.

Evennt.

Actus Secundus.

Flourish. Enter Cherme. Thus with imagin'd wing our swift Scene flyes, In motion of no lesse celeritie then that of Thought. Suppole, that you haue feene The well-appointed King at Douer Peer, Embarke his Royaltie: and his braue Fleet, With filken Streamers, the young Phebus fayning; Play with your Fancies: and in them behold, Vpon the Hempen Tackle, Ship-boyes climbing; Heare the shrill Whistle, which doth order give To founds confus'd: behold the threaden Sayles, Borne with th'inuisible and creeping Wind, Draw the huge Bottomes through the furrowed Sea, Bresting the loftie Surge. O, doe but thinke You fland you the Riuage, and behold A Citie on th'inconstant Billowes dauncing: For so appeares this Fleet Maiesticall Holding due course to Harflew. Follow, follow: Grapple your minds to sternage of this Nauie And leave your England as dead Mid-night, still, Guarded with Grandsires, Babyes, and old Women, Eyther past, or not arrived to pyth and puissance: For who is he, whose Chin is but enricht

With one appearing Hayre, that will not follow
These cull'd and choyse-drawne Caualiers to France?
Worke, worke your Thoughts, and therein see a Siege:
Behold the Ordenance on their Carriages,
With stall mouthes gaping on girded Harslew.
Suppose th Embassador from the French comes back:
Tells Harry, That the King doth offer him
Katherine his Daughter, and with her to Dowrie,
Some petty and unprositable Dukedomes.
The offer likes not: and the nimble Gunner
With Lynstock now the diuellish Cannon touches,
Alarum, and Chambers gas off.
And downe goes all before them. Still be kind.

And downe goes all before them. Still be kind,
And eech out our performance with your mind. Ext.

Enter the King, Exeter, Bedford, and Gloucester.

Alarum: Scaling Ladders at Harster.

King. Once more vnto the Breach, Deare friends, once more; Or close the Wall up with our English dead: In Peace, there's nothing fo becomes a man, As modest stillnesse, and humilitie: But when the blaft of Warre blowes in our eares, Then imitate the action of the Tyger: Stiffen the finewes, commune vp the blood, Disguise faire Nature with hard-fauour'd Rage: Then lend the Eye a terrible aspect: Let it pry through the portage of the Head, Like the Braffe Cannon: let the Brow o'rewhelme it, As fearefully, as doth a galled Rocke O're-hang and jutty his confounded Base, Swill'd with the wild and wastfull Ocean. Now fet the Teeth, and stretch the Nosthrill wide, Hold hard the Breath, and bend vp every Spirit To his full height. On, on, you Noblish English, Whose blood is fet from Fathers of Warre-proofe: Fathers, that like fo many Alexanders Have in these parts from Morne till Euen fought, And sheath'd their Swords, for lack of argument. Dishonournot your Mothers: nowattest, That those whom you call'd Fathers, did beget you. Be Coppy now to me of groffer blood, And teach them how to Warre, And you good Yeomen, Whose Lyms were made in England; shew vs here The mettell of your Pasture: let vs sweare, That you are worth your breeding: which I doubt not: For there is none of you so meane and base, That hath not Noble luster in your eyes. I fee you stand like Grey-hounds in the slips, Straying upon the Start. The Game's afoot: Follow your Spirit; and vpon this Charge, Cry, God for Harry, England, and S. George. Alarum, and Chambers goe off.

Enter Nim, Bardolph, Pistoll, and Boy.

Bard. On, on, on, on, to the breach, to the breach.

Nim. 'Pray thee Corporall stay, the Knocks are too hot: and for mine owne part, I have not a Case of Lives: the humor of it is too hot, that is the very plaine-Song of it.

Pift. The plaine-Song is most suft: for humors doe abound: Knocks goe and come: Gods Vassals drop and dye: and Sword and Shield, in bloody Field, doth winne immortall fame.

Boy. Would I were in an Ale-house in London, I would give all my same for a Pot of Ale, and safetie.

Piff. And

The Life of Henry the Fift.

Pif. And I: If wither would preuzyle with me, my purpole should not fayle with me; but thither would I high.

Boy. As duly, but not as truly, as Bird doth fing on bough.

Enter Fluellen.

Flu. Vp to the breach, you Dogges ; augunt you Cullions

Pift. Be metcifull great Duke to men of Mould: abate thy Rage, abate thy manly Rage; abate thy Rage, great Duke. Good Bawcock bate thy Rage: vie lenitie Sweet Chuck.

Nim. These be good humors: your Honor wins bad humors. Exit,

Boy. As young as I am, I have obseru'd these three Swashets: I am Boy to them all three, but all they three, though they would ferue me, could not be Man to me; for indeed three such Antiques doe not amount to a man: for Bardo ph, hee is white-liner'd, and red fac'd; by the meanes whereof, a faces it out, but fights not: for Pistoli, hee hath a killing Tongue, and a quier Sword; by the meanes whereof, a breakes Words, and keepes whole Weapons: for Nim, hee hath heard, that men of few Words are the best men, and therefore hee tcomes to fav his Prayers, left a should be thought a Coward: but his few bad Words are matcht with as few good Deeds; for a neuer broke any mans Head but his owne, and that was against a Post, when he was drunke. They will steale any thing, and call it Purchase. Bardolph stole a Lute-case, bore it twelue Leagues, and sold it for three halfepence. Nim and Bardo'ph are Iworne Brothers in filching: and in Callice they stole a fire-shouell. I knew by that peece of Seruice, the men would carry Coales. They would haue me as familiat with mens Pockets, as cheir Gloues or their Hand-kerchers: which makes much against my Manhood, if I should take from anothers Pocker, to put into mine; for it is plaine pocketting up of Wrongs. I must leaue them, and seeke tome better Seruice : their Villany goes against my weake stomacke, and therefore I must cast it vp.

Inter Gower.

Gower. Captaine Finellen, you must come presently to the Mynes; the Duke of Gloucetter would speake with

Flu. To the Mynes? Tell you the Duke, it is not fo good to come to the Mynes: for looke you, the Mynes is not according to the disciplines of the Warre; the concaulties of it is not sufficient: for looke you, th'athuerfarie, you may discusse vnto the Duke, looke you, is digt himselfe foure yard under the Countermines: by Chestra, I thinke a will plowe vp all, if there is not better directi-

Gower. The Duke of Gloucester, to whom the Order of the Siege is given, is altogether directed by an Itish man, a very valiant Gentleman yfaith.

Welch. It is Captaine Makmerrice, is it not?

Gower. I thinke it be.

Welch. By Chefha lie is an Asse, as in the World, I will verifie as much in his Beard: he ha's no more directions in the true disciplines of the Warres, looke you, of the Roman disciplines, then is a Puppy-dog.

Enter Makmorrice, and Captaine lamy. Gower. Here a comes, and the Scots Captaine, Captaine

Zamy, with him.

Welch. Captaine lamy is a maruellous falorous Gentleman, that is certain, and of great expedition and knowledge in th'aunchiant Warres, vpon my particular knowledge of his directions: by Chefke he will maintaine his Argument as well as any Militarie man in the World, in the disciplines of the Pristing Warres of the Romans.

Scot. I say gudday, Captaine Fluellen.

Welch. Godden to your Worship, good Captaine Lames.

Gewer. How now Captaine Mackmerrice, haue you quit the Mynes? have the Pioners given o're?

Irish. By Chrish Law tish ill done: the Worke ish give over, the Trompet found the Retreat. By my Hand I sweare, and my fathers Soule, the Worke 1sh ill done: it ish give over: I would have blowed up the Towne, so Chrish saue me law, in an houre. O tish ill done, tish ill done: by my Hand tish ill done.

Welch. Captaine Mackmerrice, I beseech you now, will you voutfafe me, looke you, a few disputations with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the Warre, the Roman Warres, in the way of Argument, looke you, and friendly communication: partly to latisfie my Opinion, and partly for the fatisfaction, looke you, of my Mind: as touching the direction of the Militarie difcipline, that is the Point.

Scot. It fall be vary gud, gud feith, gud Capton's bath, and I fall quit you with gud leue, as I may pick occasion:

that fall I mary.

Infb. It is no time to discourse, so Chrish saue me: the day is hot, and the Weather, and the Warres, and the King, and the Dukes: it is no time to difcourfe, the I own is befeech'd: and the Trumpet call vs to the breach, and we talke, and be Chrish do nothing, tis shame for vs all: fo God sa'me tis sliame to stand still, it is shame by me hand: and there is Throats to be cut, and Workes to be done, and there ish nothing done, so Christ ta'ine I.w.

Scot. By the Mes, ere there eyes of mine take themselves to flomber, ayle de gud seruice, or lle ligge i'th' grund for it; ay, or goe to death: and He pay cas valor roully as I may, that fal I frienly do, that is too breff and the long: mary, I wad full tame heard tonic quest on tween you tway.

Welch. Captaine Machmorrice, I thinke, boke vou, Inder your correction, there is not many of your Ni-

Irish. Of my Nation? What ish my Nition? Ish a Villaine, and a Bafterd, and a Knoue, and a Rafaall. What ish my Nation? Who talkes of my Nation?

Welch. Looke you, if you take the matter otherwise then is meant, Captaine Mackmorrice, peraduenture I shall thinke you doe not vie me with that affabilitie, as in discretion you ought to vie me looke you, being as good a men as your selfe, both in the disciplines of Warre, and in the derivation of my Lirth, and in other particularities.

Irish. I doe not know you so good a man as my selfe: so Chrish saue me, I will cut off your Head.

Gower. Gentlemen both, you will mistake each other, Scot. A, that's a foule fault. A Parley.

Gower. The Towne founds a Parley.

Welch. Captaine Mackmorrice, when there is more better oportunitie to be required, looke you, I will be so bold as to tell you, I know the disciplines of Warre: and there is an end.

Enter the King and all his Traine before the Gates. King. How yet resolues the Gouernour of the Towne? This is the latest Parle we will admit:

There-

Therefore to our best mercy giue your selues, Or like to men prowd of destruction, Defie vs to our worst: for as I am a Souldier, A Name that in my thoughts becomes me best; If I begin the batt'rie once againe, I will not leave the halfe-atchieued Harflew, Till in her aines the lye buryed. The Gates of Mercy shall be all thut vp. And the flesh'd Souldier, rough and bard of heart, In libertie of bloody hand, shall raunge With Conference wide as Hell, mowing like Graffe Your fielh faire Virgins, and your flowing Intants. What is it then to me, if impious Warre, Arrayed in flames like to the Prince of Fiends, Doe with his smyrcht complexion all fell scats, Fnlynckt to wast and desolation? What is't to me, when you your iclues are caufe, If your pure Maydens fall into the hand Of hot and forcing Violation? What Reyne can hold licentious Wickednesse, When downe the Hill he holds his fierce Carriere? We may as bootleffe spend our vaine Command Vpon th enraged Souldiers in their spoyle, As fend Precepts to the Leuiathan, to come ashore. Therefore, you men of Harflew Take pitty of your Towne and of your People, Whiles yet my Souldiers are in my Command, Whiles yet the coole and temperate Wind of Grace O're-blowes the filthy and contagious Clouds Of headly Murther, Spoyle, and Villany. If not: why in a moment looke to fee The blind and bloody Souldier, with toule hand Defire the Locks of your shrill-shriking Daughters: Your Fathers taken by the filuer Beards, And their most reuerend Heads dasht to the Walls: You naked Infants spitted vpon Pykes, Whiles the mad Mothers, with their howles confus'd, Doe breake the Clouds; as did the Wives of Lewry, At Heroa's bloody-hunting flaughter-men. What fay you? Will you yeeld, and this auoyd? Or gadae in defence, be thus deffroy'd.

Enter Gouernour.

Goner. Our expectation hath this day an end:

The Dolphin, whom of Succours we entreated, Returnes vs, that his Powers are yet not ready, To rayie fo great a Siege: Therefore great King, We yeeld our Towne and Lines to thy foft Mercy: Enter our Gates, dispose of vs and ours,

For we no longer are defenfible.

King. Open your Gates: Come Vnckle Exeter, Goeyou and enter Harflew; there remaine, And fortifie it strongly gainst the French: Vie mercy to them all for vs, deare Vnckle. The Winter comming on, and Sicknesse growing Vpon our Souldiers, we will retyre to Calis. To night in Harslew will we be your Guest, I'o morrow for the March are we addrest.

Flourish, and enter the Towne.

Enter Katherine and an old Gentlewoman. Kathe. Mice tu as efte en Angleterre, & tu bien parlas le Language.

Alice. En peu Madame.

Kaib. Ie te prie m ensigniez, il fint que le apprend a parlen: Comient appelle vous le main en Anglois? Alice. Le main il & appelle de Hand. Kaib. De Hand.

Alice. Excellent, Madame.

Kath. C'est asses pour une foyes, alons nous a diner.

Enter the King of France, the Dolphin, the Constable of France, and others.

King. Tis certaine he hath past the River Some.

Const. And if he be not fought withall, my Lord,

Let vs not live in France: let vs quit all,

And give our Vineyards to a barbarous People.

Delph. O Dieu vinant: Shall a few Sprayes of vs, The emptying of our Fathers Luxurie, Our Syens, put in wilde and fauage Stock, Spirt vp so suddenly into the Clouds,

And ouer-looke their Grafters?

Brit. Normans, but bastard Normans, Norman bastards:
Nore du mavie, if they march along

Vnfought withall, but I will fell my Dukedome,

To

To buy a flobbry and a durtie Farme In that nooke-shotten He of Albion.

Conft. Dieu de Battalles, where have they this mettell?
Is not their Clymate foggy, raw, and dull?
On whom, as in despight, the Sunne lookes pale,
Killing their Fruit with frownes. Can sodden Water,
A Drench for sur-reyn'd Iades, their Barly broth,
Decoest their cold blood to such valuant heat?
And shall our quick blood, spritted with Wine,
Seeme frostie? O, for honor of our Land,
Let vs not hang like roping syckles
Vpon our Houses Thatch, whiles a more frostie People
Sweat drops of gallant Youth in our rich sields:
Poore we call them, in their Native Lords.

Dalphin. By Fatth and Honor, Our Madames mock at vs and plainely fay, Our Mettell is bred out, and they will give Their bodyes to the Lust of English Youth, To new-store France with Dastard Warriors.

Brst. They bid vs to the English Dancing-Schooles, And teach Landta's high, and swift Carranto's, Saying, our Grace is onely in our Heeles, And that we are most lostic Run-awayes.

King. Where is Montion the Herald? peed him hence, Let him greet England with our sharpe defiance. Vp Princes, and with spirit of Honor edged, More therper then your Swords, high to the field: Charles Clabreth, High Constable of France, You Dukes of Orleance, Burbon, and of Berry, Alanson, Brabant, Bar, and Eurgonie, Iaques Chattillion, Rambures, Vandensout, Beumont, Grand Pree, Roussi, and Faulconbridge. Loys, Leftrale, Bouciquall, and Charaloyes, High Dukes, great Princes, Barons, Lords, and Kings; For your great Seats, now quit you of great shames: Barre Harry England, that I weepes through our Land With Penons painted in the blood of Harflew: Ruih on his Hoalf, as doth the melted Snow Vpon the Valleyes, whose low Vasfall Seat, The Alpes doth spit, and void his thewme vpon. Goe downe vpon him, you have Power enough, And in a Captine Charlot, into Roan Bring him our Prisoner.

Const. This becomes the Great.

Sorry am I his numbers are so sew,
His Souldiers sick, and famisht in their March:
For I am sure, when he shall see our Army,
Hee'le drop his heart into the sinck of seare,
And for atchieuement, esser vs his Ransome.

King. Therefore Loid Constable, hast on Montioy, And let him say to England, that we fend, To know what willing Ransome he will give. Prince Dolphin, you shall stay with vs in Roan.

Dulph. Not fo, I doe befeech your Maieffie.

King. Be patient, for you shall remaine with vs.

Now forth Lord Conflable, and Princes all,

And quickly bring vs word of Englands fall. Exeunt.

Enter Captaines, English and Welch, Gower and Fluesten.

Gower. How now Captaine Fluellen, come you from the Bridge?

Flu. 1 assure you, there is very excellent Seruices committed at the Bridge.

Gower. Is the Duke of Fxeter safe?
Flu. The Duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Aga-memon, and a man that I love and honour with my foule, and my heart, and my dutie, and my live, and my living, and my vttermost power. He is not, God be prayfed and blessed, any hurt in the World, but keepes the Bridge most valiantly, with excellent discipline. There is an aunchient Lieutenant there at the Pridge, I thinke in my very conscience hee is as valiant a man as Marke Anthony, and hee is a man of no estimation in the World, but I did see him doe as gallant service.

Gower. What doe you call him?
Flu. Hee is call'd aunchient Postoll.
Gower. 1 know him not.

Enter Piftoll.

Flw. Here is the man.

Pist. Captaine, I thee beseech to doe me fauours: the Duke of Exeter doth love thee well.

Flu. I, I pray se God, and I have merited some love at his hands.

Pist. Bardolph, a Souldier firme and found of heart, and of buxome valour, hath by civell Fate, and giddle Fortunes furious fickle Wheele, that Goddesse blind, that stands upon the rolling restlesse Stone.

Ilu. By your patience, aunchient Pistoll: Fortune is painted blinde, with a Musser afore his eyes, to signific to you, that Fortune is blinde; and shee is painted also with a Wheele, to signific to you, which is the Morall of it, that shee is turning and inconstant, and mutabilitie, and variation: and her foot, looke you, is fixed you a Sphericall Stone, which towles, and rowles, and rowles: in good truth, the Poet makes a most excellent description of it: Fortune is an excellent Morall.

Pist. Fortune is Bardolphs foe, and frownes on him: for he hath stolne a Pax, and hanged must a be: a damned death: let Gallowes gape for Dogge, let Man goe free, and let not Hempe his Wind-pipe suffocate: but Exeter hath given the doome of death, for Pax of little price. Therefore goe speake, the Duke will heare thy voyce; and let not Bardolphs vitall thred bee cut with edge of Penny-Cord, and vile reproach. Speake Captaine for his Life, and I will thee require,

Flu. Aunchient Psfloll, I doe partly understand your meaning.

Pift. Why then reioyce therefore.

Fin. Certainly Aunchient, it is not a thing to reloyce at: for if, looke you, he were my Brother, I would defire the Duke to vie his good pleafure, and put him to execution; for discipline ought to be vied.

Pift. Dye, and be dam'd, and Figo for thy friendship.

Flu. It is well.

Pift. The Figge of Spaine. Exit.

Ila, Very good.

Gower. Why, this is an arrent counterfeit Rascall, I remember him now: a Bawd, a Cut-purse.

Flu. Ile assure you, a vettred as praue words at the Pridge, as you shall see in a Summers day: but it is very well: what he ha's spoke to me, that is well I warrant you, when time is serue.

Gower. Why 'tis a Gull, a Foole, a Rogue, that now and then goes to the Warres, to grace himselfe at his returne into London, under the forme of a Souldier: and such sellowes are perfit in the Great Commanders Names, and they will learne you by rote where Seruices were done; at such and such a Sconce, at such a Breach, at such a Convoy: who came off brauely, who was shot, who difgrac'd, what termes the Enemy stood on: and this they conne perfitly in the phrase of Watre; which they tricke vp with new-tuned Oathes: and what a Beard of the Generalls Cut, and a horride Sute of the Campe, will doe among foming Bottles, and Ale-washt Wits, is wonderfull to be thought on: but you must learne to know such flanders of the age, or elie you may be maruelloufly mi-Rooke.

Flu. I tell you what, Captaine Gewer: I doe perceiue hee is not the man that hee would gladly make shew to the World hee is: if I finde a hole in his Coat, I will tell him my minde: hearke you, the King is comming, and I must speake with him from the Pridge.

Drum and Colours. Enter the King and his poore Sonldiers. Flu. God plesse your Maiestie.

King. How now Fluellen, cam's thou from the Bridge? Flw. I, so please your Maiestie: The Duke of Exeter ha's very gallantly maintain'd the Pridge; the French is gone off, looke you, and there is gallant and most praue passages: marry, th'athuertarie was haue possession of the Pridge, but he is enforced to retyre, and the Duke of Exercer is Master of the Pridge: I can tell your Maiestie, the Duke is a praue man.

King. What men have you lost, Fluellen?
Flue. The perdition of th'athuersarie hath beene very great, reasonnable great: marry for my part, I thinke the Duke hath loft neuer a man, but one that is like to be executed for robbing a Church, one Bardolph, if your Maiesie know the man: his face is all bubukles and whelkes, and knobs, and slames a fire, and his hippes blowes at his nose, and it is like a coale of fire, sometimes plew, and fometimes red, but his nose is executed, and his fire's

King. Wee would have all such offendors so cut off: and we give expresse charge, that in our Marches through the Countrey, there be nothing compell'd from the Villages; nothing taken, but pay'd for: none of the French vpbrayded or abused in disdainefull Language; for when Leuitie and Crueltie play for a Kingdome, the gentler Gamester is the soonest winner.

Tucket. Enter Mountiny.

Mountier. You know me by my habit.

King. Wellthen, I know thee: what shall I know of thee?

Mountiey. My Masters mind.

King. Vnfold it.

Mounting. Thus sayes my King: Say thou to Harry of England, Though we feem'd dead, we did but fleepe: Aduantage is a better Souldier then rashnesse. Tell him, wee could have rebuk'd him at Harflewe, but that wee thought not good to bruise an injurie, till it were full ripe. Now wee speake vpon our Q. and our voyce is imperiall: England shall repent his folly, see his weakenesse, and admire our sufferance. Bid him therefore confider of his ransome, which must proportion the losses we have borne, the subjects we have lost, the disgrace we haue digested; which in weight to re-answer, his pettinesse would bow under. For our losses, his Exchequer is too poore; for th'effusion of our bloud, the Muster of his Kingdome too faint a number; and for our disgrace, his owne person kneeling at our feet, but a weake and worthlesse satisfaction. To this adde desiance: and tell him for conclusion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose condemnation is pronounc's: So farre my King and Mafters so much my Office.

King. What is thy name? I know thy qualitie. Mount. Mounties

King. Thou doo'ft thy Office fairely. Turne thee back, And tell thy King, I doe not feeke him now, But could be willing to march on to Callice, Without impeachment: for to fay the footh, Though tis no wildome to confesse so much Vnto an enemie of Craft and Vantage, My people are with ficknesse much enfeebled, My numbers leffen'd: and those few I have, Almost no better then so many French; Who when they were in health, I tell thee Herald, I thought, ypon one payre of English Legges Did march three Frenchmen. Yet forgive me God, That I doe bragge thus; this your ayre of France Hath blowne that vice in me. I must repent : Goe therefore tell thy Master, heere I am; My Ransome, is this frayle and worthlesse Trunke; My Army, but a weake and fickly Guard. Yet God before, tell him we will come on, Though France himselse, and such another Neighbor Stand in our way. There's for thy labour Mountiny. Goe bid thy Master well aduise himselse. If we may passe, we will: if we be hindred, We shall your tawnic ground with your red blood Discolour: and io Mountsoy, fare you well. The fumme of all our Answer is but this: We would not seeke a Battaile as we ate, Nor as we are, we say we will not shun it: So tell your Master.

Mount. I shall deliver so: Thankes to your High-

Glone. I hope they will not come vpon vs now. King. We aren Gods hand, Brother, not in theirs: March to the Bridge, it now drawes toward night, Beyond the River wee'le encampe our selucs, And on to morrow bid them march away.

Enter the Constable of France, the Lord Ramburs, Orlance, Dolphin, wish others.

Const. Tut, I have the best Armour of the World: would it were day.

Orleance. You have an excellent Armour : but let my Horse have his due.

Const. It is the best Horse of Europe. Orleance. Will it neuer be Morning?

Dolph. My Lord of Orleance, and my Lord High Con-Stable, you talke of Horse and Armour?

Orleance. You are as well prouided of both, as any Prince in the World.

Delph. What a long Night is this? I will not change my Horse with any that treades but on soure postures: ch' ha: he bounds from the Earth, as if his entrayles were hayres: le Chenal velance, the Pegalus, ches les narines de few. When I bestryde him, I soare, I am a Hawke: he trota the ayre: the Earth lings, when he touches it the baseft horne of his hoofs, is more Musicall then the Pipe of Orleance. Hee's of the colour of the Nutmeg. Dolph. And of the heat of the Ginger. It is a Beast for Person: hee is pure Ayre and Fire; and the dull Elements of Earth and Water neuer appears in him, but only in patient stillnesse while his Rider mounts him: hee is indeede a Horse, and all other lades you may call

Conft. Indeed my Lord, it is a most absolute and excellent Horse.

Dolph. It is the Prince of Palfrayes, his Neigh is like the bidding of a Monarch, and his countenance enforces Homage.

Orleance. No more Cousin.

Dolph. Nay, the man hath no wit, that cannot from the riling of the Larke to the lodging of the Lambe, varie deserued prayle on my Palfray : it is a Theame as Auent as the Sea: Turne the Sands into eloquent tongues, and my Horse is argument for them all : 'tis a subject for a Soueraigne to reason on, and for a Soueraignes Soueraigne to ride on: And for the World, familiar to vs, and vnknowne, to lay apart their particular Functions, and wonder at him, I once writ a Sonnet in his prayle, and began thus, Wonder of Nature.

Orleance. I haue heard a Sonnet begin so to ones Mi-

Aresse.

. Dolph. Then did they imitate that which I compos'd to my Courler, for my Horle is my Mistresse.

Orleance. Your Mistresse beares well.

Dolph. Me well, which is the prescript prayse and perfection of a good and particular Mistresse.

Conft. Nay, for me thought yesterday your Mistiesse shrewdly shooke your back.

Dolph. So perhaps did yours. Couft. Mine was not bridled.

Dolph. O then belike the was old and gentle, and you rode like a Kerne of Ireland, your French Hose off and in your strait Strossers.

Const. You have good judgement in Horsemanship.

Dolph. Be warn'd by me then: they that ride fo, and ride not warily, fall into foule Boggs: I had rather haue my Horte to my Mistresse.

Const. I had as liue haue my Mistresse a laie.

Dolph. I tell thee Constable, my Militelle weares his owne hayre.

Const. I could make as true a boast as that, if I had a Sow to my Mistreffe.

Dolph. Le chien est retourne a son propre vem sement est la leure lance an bourbier: thou mak'it vie of any thing.

Conft. Yet doe I not vie my Haife for my Mittieffe, or any fuch Prouerbe, fo little kin to the purpole.

Ramb. My Lord Conflable, the Armour that I faw in your Tent to night, ere those Starres or Sunnes vpon it? Conft. Startes my Lord.

Delph. Some of them will fall to morrow, I hope.

Conft. And yet my Sky shall not want.

Dolph. That may be, for you beare a many superfluoully an l'ewere more honor some were away.

Corf. From as your Horse beares your prayses, who would trot as well, were fome of your bragges difmounred.

Diff. Would I were able to loade him with his defert. Will it near r be day? I will trot to morrow a mile, and my way fill the paued with English Faces.

Co ft. I will not fay fo, for feare I should be fac't out of my way: but I would it were morning, for I would came be about the cues of the English.

vimb. Who will give to Hazard with me for twentie

Pationers?

Conft. You must first goe your selfe to hazard, ere you haue them.

Dulph. Tis Mid-night, He goe arme my selfe. Exit. Orleance. The Dolphin longs for morning.

Ramb. He longs to eate the English.

Conft. I thinke he will eate all he kills.

Orleance. By the white Hand of my Lady, hee's a gallant Prince.

Conft. Sweare by her Foot, that the may tread out the Oath.

Orleance. He is simply the most active Gentleman of Conft. Doing is activitie, and he will still be doing. Orleance. He neuer did harme, that I heard of.

Conft. Nor will doe none to morrow: hee will keepe that good name still.

Orleance. I know him to be valiant.

Conft. I was told that, by one that knowes him better then you.

Orleance. What's hee?

Const. Marry hee told me so himselfe, and hee sayd hee car'd not who knew it.

Orleance. Heencedes not, it is no hidden vertue in Const. By my faith Sir, but it is: neuer any body faw it, but his Lacquey: 'tis a hooded valour, and when it appeares, it will bate.

Orleance. Ill will neuer sayd well.

Const. I will cap that Prouerbe with, There is flatterie in friendship.

Orleance. And I will take up that with, Give the Deuill

Conft. Well plac't: there stands your friend for the Deuil: haue at the very eye of that Prouerbe with, A Pox of the Deuill.

Orleance. You are the better at Proucibs, by how much 2 Fooles Bolt is soone shot.

Const You have finot over.

Orlemee. The not the first time you were over-shot.

Enter a liseffinger.

Ateff. My Lord high Conflable, the English lye within fifteent hundred paces of your Tents.

Conft. Who hath meafur'd the ground?

M. The Lord Grandpree.

Conft. A vultant and most expert Gentleman. Would it were day? Alas poore Harry of Englanu: hee longs not for the Dawning, as wee doe.

Orleance. What a wretched and peeuish scllow is this King of England, to mope with his fat-brain'd followers so farre out of his knowledge.

Const. If the English had any apprehension, they would runne away.

Orleance. That they lack : for :f their heads had any intellectuall Armour, they could never weare such heavie Head-pieces.

Ramb. That Iland of England breedes very valiant Creatures; their Mastufes are of vumatchable cou-

Orleance. Foolish Curres, than runne winking into the mouth of a Ruffian Beart, and haue their heads crasht like rotten Apples: you may as well fay, that's a valiant Flea, that dare eate his breakefast on the Lippe of a Lyon.

Conft. Iuft, iuft: and the men doe sympathize with the Mastisses, in robustious and rough comming on, leauing their Wits with their Wines: and then gine them great Meales of Beefe, and Iron and Steele; they will eate like Wolues, and fight like Deuils.

Orleance. I,

83

Orleance. I, but these English are shrowdly out of Beefe.

Const. Then shall we finde to morrow, they have only stomackes to eate, and none to fight. Now is it time to arme: come, shall we about it?

Orleance. It is now two a Clock: but let me see, by ten Wee shall have each a hundred English men. Exeunt.

Allus Tertius.

Now entertaine coniecture of a time, When creeping Murmure and the poring Darke Fills the wide Veilell of the Vinucite. From Comp to Camp, through the for le Womb of Night The Humme of cycl er Army stilly founds; That the fixt Centinels almost receive The fecret Whilpers of each others Watch. Fire answers fire, and through their paly flames Fach Battaile fees the others vmber'd face. Steed threatens Steed, in high and boafffull Neighs Piercing the Nights dull Eare: and from the Tents, The Armourers accomplifying the Knights, With busie Hammers closing Rivers vp. Giue dreadfull note of preparation. The Countrey Cocks doe crow, the Clocks doe towle: And the third howre of drowlie Morning nam'd, Prowd of their Numbers, and secure in Soule, The confident and ouer-luftie French, Doe the low-rated English play at Dice; And chide the creeple-tardy-gated Night, Who like a foule and ough Witch doth limpe So tediously away. The poore condemned English, Like Sacrifices, by their watchfull Fires Sit patiently, and inly ruminate The Mornings danger: and their gesture fad, Inueffing lanke-leane Cheekes, and Warre-worne Coats, Presented them vnto the gazing Moone So many horride Ghosts. O now, who will behold The Royall Captaine of this ruin'd Band Walking from Watch to Watch, from Tent to Tent; Let him cry, Prayle and Glory on his head: For forth he goes, and visits all his Hoaft, Bids then good morrow with a medelt Smyle, And calls them Brothers, Friends, and Countreymen. Vpon his Royall Face there is no note, How dread an Army hath enrounded him; Nor doth he dedicate one iot of Colour Vnto the wearie and all-watched Night: But freshly lookes, and ouer-beares Attaint, With chearefull semblance, and sweet Maiestie: That every Wretch, pining and pale before, Beholding him, plucks comfort from his Lookes. A Largesse vniuerfall, like the Sunne, His liberall Eye doth give to every one, Thaving cold feare, that meane and gentle all Behold, as may vn worthineffe define. A little touch of Harry in the Night, And so our Scene must to the Battaile flye: Where, O for pitty, we shall much disgrace, With foure or fine most vile and ragged foyles, (Right ill difpos'd, in brawle ridiculous)

The Name of Agincourt: Yet fit and see, Minding true things, by what their Mock ries bee.

Enter the King, Bedford, and Gloucester.

King. Gloffer, tis true that we are in great danger, The greater therefore should our Courage be. God morrow Brother Bedford: God Almightie, There is some soule of goodnesse in things euill, Would men obseruingly distill it out. For our bad Neighbour makes vs early stirrers, Which is both healthfull, and good husbandry. Besides, they are our outward Consciences, And Preachers to vs all; admonthing, That we should dresse vs fairely for our end. Thus may we gather Honey from the Weed, And make a Morall of the Diuell himselfe.

Enter Erpingham. Good morrow old Sir Thomas Erpingham: A good fost Pillow for that good white Head, Were better then a churlish turse of France.

Erping. Not so my Liege, this Lodging likes me better,

Since I may fay, now lye I like a King.

Kmg. Tis good for men to loue their present paines, ${f V}$ pon example, to the Spirit is eated : And when the Mind is quickned, out of doubt The Organs, though defunct and dead before, Breake up their drowfie Graue and newly moue With caited flough, and fresh legeritie. Lend me thy Cloake Sir Thomas: Brothers both, Commend me to the Princes in our Campes Doe my good morrow to them, and anon Defire them all to my Pauillion. Gloster. We shall, my Liege.

Erping. Shall I attend your Grace? Keig. No, my good Knight: Goe with my Brothers to my Lords of England: I and my Bosome must debate a while,

And then I would no other company Erping. The Lord in Heauen bleffe thee, Noble Harry.

King. God a mercy old Heart. thou speakist cheare-Enter Piftoll.

Pift. Che vom la?

King. A friend.
Pift. Discusse vnto me, art thou Officer, or art thou base,common,and popular?

King. I am a Gentleman of a Company. Pift. Trayl'st thou the puissant Pyke? King. Even fo: what are you?

Pist. As good a Gentleman as the Emperor.

King. Then you are a better then the King.

Pist. The King's a Bawcock, and a Heart of Gold, a Lad of Life, an Impe of Fame, of Parents good, of Fift most valiant: I kille his dugie shooe, and from heartstring I love the lovely Bully. What is thy Name?

King, Harry le Rey

Poft. Le Royl a Cornish Name: art thou of Cornish Crew?

King. No, I am a Welchman. Pift. Know'st thou Fluellen?

King. Yes.
21st. Tell him Ile knock his Leeke about his Pete vpon S. Danies day.

King. Doe not you weare your Dagger in your Cappe that day, leaft he knock that about yours, Poft. Art thou his friend? g. And his Kinîman too. Pift. The Fige for thee then.

King. I thanke you: God be with you.

Piff. My name is Pistol call'd. King. It forts well with your fiercenesse.

Manet King.

Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Gower. Captaine Finellen.

Flu. 'So, in the Name of Ielu Christ, speake sewer: it is the greatest admiration in the universali World, when the true and aunchiegt Prerogatifes and Lawes of the Warres is not kept: if you would take the paines but to examine the Warres of Pompey the Great, you shall finde, I warrant you, that there is no tiddle tadle nor pibble bable in Pompeyes Campe: I warrant you, you shall finde the Ceremonies of the Warres, and the Cares of it, and the Formes of 11, and the Sobrietie of 11, and the Modestie of it, to be otherwise.

Gower. Why the Enemie is lowd, you heare him all Night.

Flu. If the Enemie is an Affe and a Foole, and a prating Coxcombe; is it meet, thinke you, that wee should alio, looke you, be an Affe and a Foole, and a prating Coxcombe, in your owne conscience now?

Gow. I will speake lower.

Flu. I pray you, and beseech you, that you will. Exit. King. Though it appeare a little out of fashion, There is much care and valour in this Welchman.

Enter three Souldiers, John Bates, Alexander Court, and Michael Williams.

Court. Brother lobn Bates, is not that the Morning which breakes yonder?

Bases. I thinke it be: but wee haue no great cause to defire the approach of day.

Williams. Wee see yonder the beginning of the day, but I thinke wee shall never see the end of it. Who goes there?

King. A Friend.

Williams. Vnder what Captaine serue you?

King. Vinder Sir John Erpingham.

Williams. A good old Commander, and a most kinde Gentleman: I pray you, what thinkes he of our estate?

King. Euen as men wrackt vpon a Sand, that looke to be waiht off the next Tyde.

Bates. He hath not told his thought to the King?

King. No: nor it is not meet he should: for though I speake it to you, I thinke the King is but a man, as I am : the Violet smells to him, as it doth to me; the Element showes to him, as it doth to me; all his Sences have but humane Conditions: his Ceremonies layd by, in his Nakednesse he appeares but a man; and though his affections are higher mounted then ours, yet when they floupe, they stoupe with the like wing: therefore, when he sees reason of seares, as we doe; his seares, out of doubt, be of the same relissions are: yet in reason, no man should possesse him with any appearance of seare; least hee, by flewing it, should dis-hearten his Army.

Bates. He may shew what outward courage he will: but I beleeve, as cold a Night as itis, hee could with himfelfe in Thames up to the Neck; and so I would he were, and I by him, at all aduentures, so we were quit here.

King. By my troth, I will speake my conscience of the King: I thinke hee would not with himselfe any where, but where hee is.

Bates. Then I would be were here alone; so should be be lute to be ranfomed, and a many poore mens lives faued.

King. I dare say, you loue him not so all, to wish him here alone: howiocuer you speake this to feele other mens minds, me thinks I could not dye any where so contented, as in the Kings company; his Cause being just, and his Quarrell honorable.

Williams. That's more then we know.

Bates. I, or more then wee should seeke after; for wee know enough, if weeknow wee are the Kings Subjects: if his Cause be wrong, our obedience to the King wipes the Cryme of it out of vs.

Williams. But if the Cause be not good, the King himselse hath a heavie Reckoning to make, when all those Legges, and Armes, and Heads, chopt off in a Battaile, shall soyne together at the latter day, and cry all, Wee dyed at fuch a place, some swearing, tome crying for a Surgean; some vpon their Wines, lest poore behind them; some vpon the Debts they owe, some vpon their Children rawly left: I am afear'd, there are few dye well, that dye in a Battaile: for how can they charitably dispote of any thing, when Blood is their argument? Now, if their men doe not dye well, it will be a black matter for the King, that led them to it; who to disobey, were against all proportion of subjection.

King. So, if a Sonne that is by his Father sent about Merchandize, doe finfully miscarry vpon the Sea; the iniputation of his wickednesse, by your rule; should be imposed vpon his Father that sent him : or if a Seruaut, vnder his Masters command, transporting a summe of Money, be affayled by Robbers, and dye in many irreconcil'd Iniquities; you may call the bufinelle of the Master the author of the Servants damnation: but this is not fo: The King is not bound to answer the particular endings of his Souldiers, the Father of his Sonne, nor the Master of his Servant; for they purpose not their death, when they purpose their services. Besides, there is no King, be his Cause neuer so spotlesse, if it come to the arbitiement of Swords, can trye it out with all viilpotted Souldiers: some (peraduenture) haue on them the guilt of premeditated and contrined Murther; some, of beginling Virgins with the broken Scales of Perintie; fonic, making the Warres their Bulwarke, that have before gored the gentle Bosome of Mace with Pillage and Robberie. Now, if these men haue deseated the Law, and outrunne Natiue punishment; though they can out-strip men, they have no wings to flye from God. Warre is his Beadle, Warre is his Vengeance: so that here men are punisht, for before breach of the Kings Lawes in now the Kings Quarrell: where they feared the death, they have borne life away; and where they would bee fafe, they perish. Then if they dye vnprouided, no more is the King guiltie of their damnation, then hee was before guiltie of thote Impieties, for the which they are now visited. Every Subjects Dutie is the Kings, but every Subjects Soule is his owne. Therefore should euery Souldier in the Warres doe as euery ficke man in his Bed, wash every Moth out of his Conscience: and dying so, Death is to him advantage; or not dying, the time was bleffedly loft, wherein such preparation was gayned; and in him that elcapes, it were not finne to thinke, that making God so free an offer, he let him outlive that day, to see his Greatnesse, and to teach others how they thould prepare.

Well. I is

Will. Tis certaine, every man that dyes ill, the ill vpon his owne head, the King is not to answer it.

Bates. I doe not defire hee should answer for me, and yet I determine to fight luftily for him.

King. I my felte heard the King fay he would not be ranfom'd.

Will. I, hee said so, to make vs fight chearefully: but when our throats are cut, hee may be ranfom'd, and wee ne're the wiler.

King. If I had to fee it, I will never truft his word af-

Will. You pay him then: that's a perillous shot out of an Elder Gunne, that a poore and a private displeasure can doe against a Monarch: you may as well goe about to turne the Sunne to yee, with fanning in his face with a Peacocks feather: You'le neuer trul his word after; come, tis a foolish faying.

King. Your reproofe is formerling too round, I should be angry with you, if the time were conucnient.

Will. Let it bee a Quarrell betweene vs, if you liue.

King. I embrace it will. How shall I know thee againe?

King. Give meany Gage of thine, and I will weare it in my Bonnet: Then if ever thou dar'if acknowledge it, I will make it my Quarrell.

Will. Heere's my Gloue: Gine mee another of thine.

King. There.
will. This will I also weare in my Cap: if ever thou come to me, and say, after to morrow, This is my Gloue, by this Hand I will take thee a box on the eare.

King. If ever I live to fee it, I will challenge it. Will. Thou dat'ft as well be hang'd.

King. Well, I will doe it, though I take thee in the Kings companie.

Will. Keepe thy word: fare thee well.

Zates. Be friends you English sooles, be friends, wee have French Quarrels enow, if you could tell how to rec-Exit Souldiers.

King. Indeede the French may lay twentie French Crownes to one, they will beat vs, for they beare them on their shoulders: but it is no English Treason to cut French Crownes, and to morrow the King himfelfe will be a Clipper.

Vpon the King, let vs our Lives, our Soules, Our Debts, our carefull Wines, Our Children, and our Sinnes, lay on the King:

We must beare all.

O hard Condition, Twin-borne with Greatnesse, Subject to the breath of enery foole, whose sence No more can feele, but his owne wringing.

What infinite hearts-ease must Kings neglect, That private men enioy?

And what have Kings, that Privates have not too,

Saue Ceremonie, saue generall Ceremonie? And what are thou, thou Idoll Ceremonie? What kind of God art thou? that fuffer's more Of mortall griefes, then doe thy worshippers. What are thy Rentse what are thy Commings in?

O Ceremonie, shew me but thy worth. What? is thy Soule of Odoration?

Art thou ought elfe but Place, Degree, and Forme, Creating swe and feare in other men?

Wherein thou art leffe happy, being fear'd,

Then they to fearing.

What drink'st thou oft, in stead of Homage sweet, But poylon'd flatterier O, be fick, great Greatneffe, And bid thy Ceremonie give thee cure. Thinks thou the fierie Feuer will goe out With Titles blowne from Adulation? Will it give place to flexure and low bending # Canst thou, when thou command's the beggers knee, Command the health of it & No, thou prowd Dreame, That play'st so subtilly with a Kings Repose. i ama King that find thee; and I know 'I is not the Balme, the Scepter, and the Ball, The Sword, in: Mafe, the Crowne Imperiall, The enter-tiffined Robe of Gold and Pearle, The farfed Title running fore the King The Throne he fits on: nor the Tyde of Pompe, That be it's upon the high shore of this World: No, not all thele, thrice-gorgeous Ceremonie; Not all these, lay'd in Ped Maiesticall, Can sleepe so toundly, as the wretched Slaue: Who with a body fill'd, and vacant mind, Gets him to relt, cram'd with distressefull bread, Neuer tees horride Night, the Child of Hell: But I ke a Lacquey, from the Rife to Set, Sweates in the eye of Phebou; and all Night Sleepes in Elizium: next day after dawne, Doth rife and helpe Hiperio to his Hotse, And followes to the euer-running yeere With profitable labour to his Grave: And but for Ceremonie, such a Wretch, Winding up Dayes with toyle, and Nights with fleepe, Had the fore-hand and vantage of a King. The Slaue, a Member of the Countreyes peace, Emoyes :t; but in groffe braine little wots, What watch the King keepes, to maintaine the peace; Whole howres, the Petant best aduantages.

' Enter Erpingham.

Erp. My Lord, your Nobles seasous of your absence, Seeke through your Campe to find you,

King. Good old Knight, collect them all together

At my Tent: He be before thee.

Erp. I shall doo't,my Lord. King. O God of Battailes steele my Souldiers hearts, Possessie them not with feare: Take from them now The sence of reckning of th'opposed numbers: Pluck their hearts from them. Not to day, O Lord, O not to day, thinke not vpon the fault My Father made, in compassing the Crowne. I Richards body have interred new, And on it have bestowed more contrite testes, Then from it issued forced drops of blood. Fine hundred poore I have in yeerely pay, Who twice a day their wither'd hands hold vp Toward Heaven, to pardon blood: And I have built two Chauntries, Where the sad and solemne Priests sing still For Richards Soule. More will I doe: Though all that I can doe, is nothing worth a Since that my Penitence comes after all, Imploring pardon.

Enter Gloncester.

Glonc. My Liege. King. My Brother Gloncefters voyce? I: I know thy errand, I will goe with thee: The day, my friend, and all things stay for me.

Enter

Enter the Dolphin, Orleance, Ramburs, and Beaumont.

Orleance. The Sunne doth gild our Armour vp, my Lords.

Dolph. Monte Chenal: My Horse, Verlot Lacquay:

Ha.

Orleance. Oh braue Spirit.
Dolph. Via les smes & terre.
Orleance Rien pris le air & f. s.
Dolph. Cein, Cousin Orleance.

Enser Constable.

Now my Lord Conflable?

Conft. Hearke how our Steedes, for p elent Service neigh.

Delph. Mount them, and make incition in their Hides, That their hot blood may for i in English eyes, And doubt them with superfluous courage: ha.

Ram. What, wil you have them weep our Horses blood?

Ram. What, wil you have them weep our Hories blood How shall we then behold their naturall teares?

Enter Messer ger.

Messer. The English are embattail'd, you French

Peeres. Conft. To Horse you gallant Princes, itraight to Horse. Doe but behold yond poore and starued Band, And your faire thew shall suck away their Soules, Leaving them but the shales and huskes of men. There is not worke enough for all our hands, Scarce blood enough in all their fickly Veines, To give each naked Curtleax a flaying That our French Gallants shall to day graw our, And sheath for lack of sport. Let vs but blow on cliem, The vapour of our Valour will o're-turne them. Tis politive against all exceptions, Lords, That our superfluous Lacquies, and our Pelants, Who in vanecellarie action (warme About our Squares of Battaile, were enow To purge this field of fuch a hilding Foe; Though we vpon this Mountaines Basis by, Tooke stand for idle speculation. But that our Honours must not. What's to lay? A very little little let vs doe, And all is done: then let the Trumpets found The Tucket Sonnance, and the Note to mount . For our approach shall so much dare the field, That England shall couch downe in seare, and yee'd.

Enter Granndpree. Grandpree. Why do you stay so long, my Lords of France? Yond Hand Carrions, desperate of their bones, Ill-fauoredly become the Morning field: Their ragged Curtaines poorely are let loofe, And our Ayre shakes them passing scornefully. Bigge Mars seemes banqu'rout in their begger'd Hoaft, And faintly through a rustie Beuer peepes. The Horsemen sit like fixed Candlesticks, With Torch-staues in their hand: and their poore lades Lob downe their heads, dropping the hides and hips: The gumme downe roping from their pale-dead eyes, And in their pale dull mouthes the lymold Bitt Lyes foule with chaw'd-graffe, fill and motionleffe. And their executors, the knauish Crowes, Flye o're them all, impatient for their howre. Description cannot sute it selfe in words, To demonstrate the Life of such a Battaile, In life so livelesse, as it she wes it selfe.

Conft. They have faid their prayers,
And they flag for death.

Delph. Shall we goe fend them Dinners, and fresh Sutes,

And give their fasting Horses Provender, And after fight with them?

Const. I stay but for my Guard: on
To the field, I will the Banner from a Trumpet take,
And wie it for my haste. Come, come away,
The Sunne is high, and we out-weare the day. Ixennt.

Enter Gloucester, Bedford, Exeter, Expingham with all his Hoast: Salubury, and Westmerland.

Gloue. Where is the King?

Bedf. The King himselfe is rode to view their Bat-

west. Of fighting men they have full threescore thoufand.

Exe. There's five to one, befides they all are fresh.

Salub Gods Arme strike with vs, tis a tearefull oddes.

God buy you Princes all; He to my Charge:

If we no more meet, till we meet in Heaven;

Then joyfully, my Noble Lord of Bedford,

My deare Lord Gloucester, and my good Lord Fxeter,

And my kind Kiniman, Warriors all, adies.

Bedf. Far well good Salubary, & good luck go viith thee:

And yet I doe thee wrong, to mind thee of it,

For thou art fram'd of the firme truth of valour.

Exe. Farwell kind Lord: fight valiantly to day.

Bedf He is as full of Valour as of Kinunesic, Princely in both.

Enter the King.

West Othat we now had here

But one ten thouland of trone men in England.

That doe no worke to day. Kng. What's he that wifters fo? My Coulin Westmerland. No, my fo ie Cousta: If we are marke to dye, we are enow To doc our Countrey loffe: and if to hie, The fewer men, the greater share of honour. Gods will,! pray thee with not one man more. By lone, I am not couctous for Gold, Nor care I who doth feed vpon my coft: It yernes me not, if men my Garment, weare; Such outward things dw.cil not in my defues. But if it be a finne to couct Honor, I am the most offending Soule alive. No faith, my Couze, with not a man from England: Gods peace, I would not loofe for great an Honor, As one man more me thinkes would fliare from me, For the best hope a haue. O doe not wish one more: Rather proclaime it (Westmerland) through my Hoalt, That he which hath no flomack to this fight, Let him depart, his Paiport shall be made, And Crownes for Connoy put into his Purse: We would not dye in that mans companie, That feares his fellowship, to dye with vs. This day is call'd the Feast of Crispian: He that out-lines this day, and comes safe home, Will (tand a tip-toe when this day is named, And rowse him at the Name of Crispian. He that shall see this day, and live old age, Will yeerely on the Vigil feast his neighbours, And say, to morrow is Saint Crispian. Then will be Arip his secue, and shew his skarres: Old men forget; yet all shall be forgot: But hee'le remember, with advantages What feats he did that day. Then shall our Names, Familiar in his mouth as household words,

Excunt.

Harry the King, Bedford and Exeter, Warwick and Tulber, Salubury and Glouceffer, Be in their flowing Cups freshly remembred. This story shall the good man teach his sonne: And Criftine Criftian thall ne're goe by, From this day to the ending of the World, But we in it shall be remembred; We tew, we happy few, we band of brothers. For he to day that shed, his blood with me, shall be my brother: be he ne're to vile, This day shall gentle his Condition. And Gentlemen in England, now a bed, Shall thinke the i felius accuiff they were not here; And hold their Manhoods cheape, whiles any speaker, That fought with vs vpon Saint Creffines day. Later Salubury.

Sal. My Soucraign Lord, bestow your selfe with speed: The French are branely in their battailes let, And will with all expedience charge on vs.

King. All things are ready, if our minds be fo. West. Perish the man, whose mind is backward now. King. Thou do'ft not wish more helpe from England,

Heft. Gods will, my Liege, would you and I alone, Without more helpe, could fight this Royall battaile. King. Why now thou hast viwisht fine thousand men: Which likes me better, then to wish vs one. You know your places: God be with you all.

Tusket. Enter Montroy. Mont. Once more I come to know of thee King Harry, It for thy Ransome thou wilt now compound, Before thy most assured Ouerthrow: For certainly, thou art so neere the Gulfe, Thou needs must be englutted. Besides, in mercy The Constable desires thee, thou wilt mind Thy followers of Repentance; that their Soules May make a peacefull and a fiveet retyre From off these fields: where (wretches) their poore bodies Must lye and fester.

King. Who hath fent thee now? Mont. The Constable of France.

King. I pray thee beare my former Answer back: Bid them atchieue me, and then fell my bones. Good God, why should they mock poore fellowes thus? The man that once did fell the Lyons skin While the beast liv'd, was kill'd with hunting him. A many of our bodyes shall no doubt Find Natiue Graues: vpon the which, I trust Shall witnesse line in Brasse of this dayes worke. And those that leave their valiant bones in France, Dying like men, though buryed in your Dunghills, They shall be fam'd: for there the Sun shall greet them, And draw their honors reeking vp to Heauen, Leauing their earthly parts to choake your Clyme, The smell whereof shall breed a Plague in France. Marke then abounding valour in our English: That being dead, like to the bullets crasing, Breake out into a second course of mischiete, Killing in relapse of Mortalitie. Let me speake prowdly : Tell the Conflable, We are but Warriors for the working day: Our Gaynesse and our Gilt are all besmyrcht With raynie Marching in the paincfull field. There's not a piece of feather in our Hoast: Good argument (I hope) we will not flye:

And time hath worne vs into flouentie. But by the Masse, out hearts are in the trim: And my poore Souldiers tell me, yet ere Night, They'le be in fresher Robes, or they will pluck
The gay new Coats o're the French Souldiers heads, And turne them out of service. If they doe this, As if God please, they shall; my Ransome then Will soone be leuyed. Herauld, face thou thy labour: Come thou no more for Ransome, gentle Herauld, They shall have none, I sweare, but these my 10 ynts: Which if they have as I will leave vm them, Shall yeeld them little, tell the Constable. Mont. I shall, King Harry. And so fare thee well:

Thou neuer shalt heare Herauld any more. King. I feare thou wilt once more come againe for a Rantoine.

Enter Yorke. Torke. My Lord, most humbly on my knee I begge The leading of the Vaward.

King. Take it, braue Yorke. Now Souldiers march away, And how thou pleasest God, dispose the day.

> Alarum. Excursions. Enter Pistoll, Erench Souldier, Boy.

P.f. Yeeld Corre.

French. le pense que vossi estes le Gentslhome de bon qua-

Pist. Qualtine calmie custure me. Art thou a Gentleman? What is thy Name? discusse.

French. O Scignear Dieu.

11.7.0 Signieur Dewe should be a Gentleman: perpend my words O Signieur Dewe, and marke: O Signieur Dewe, thou dyest on point of Fox, except O Signieur thou doc give to me egregious Ransome.

Trench. O prennes miserecordie aye pitez de moy.

Pist. Moy shall not serve, I will have fortie Moyes: for I will fetch thy rymme out at thy Throat, in droppes of Crimion blood French Est il impossible d'eschapper le force de ton bras. P.f. Braffe, Curre?thou damned and luxurious Mountaine Goat, offer'st me Brasse?

French. O perdonne moy.

Pift. Say'st thou me so? is that a Tonne of Moyes? Come hisher boy, 2ske me this flaue in French what is his Name.

Toy. Esconte comment estes vous appelle? Ircush. Mounsieur le Fer

Boy. He sayes his Name is M. For.

Pift. M.Fer: He fer him, and firke him, and ferret him: discusse the same in French vnto him.

Boy. I doe not know the French for fer, and ferret, and

Tel. Bid him prepare, for I will cut his throat.

French. Que dit il Monnsieur ?

Boy. Il me commande a vous dire que vous faite vous prest, car ce soldat icy est disposee tout asture de conppes vostre gorge.

Psft. Owy, cuppele gorge permafoy pesant, vnlesse thou give me Crownes, brave Crownes, or mangled shalt thou be by this my Sword.

French. O Ievous supplie pour l'amour de Dieu: ma par-donner, le suis le Gentilbome de bon maison, garde ma vie, & le vom donneray deux cent escm.

Pift. What are his words?

Boy. He

Boy. He prayes you to faue his life, ho is a Gentleman of a good house, and for his ransom he will give you two hundred Crownes.

Pift. Tell inimmy fury shall abate, and I the Crownes will take.

Fron Petit Monsseur que dit il?

Boy. Encore qu'il et comra son l'arement, de pardonner aucune prisonner: neant-mans pour les escues que vous layt a promets, il est content a vone donnes le liberse le franchesement.

Ere. Sur mergenoux se vous donnes milles remercions, et le me estime beurex que le intombe, entre les main. d'un Chenalier le pense le plus brane valsant et tres distinie signieur d'Angleserre.

Pif. Expound vnto me boy.

Bey. He gives you vpon his knees a thousand thanks, and he esteemes himselfe happy, that he hath falne into the hands of one (as he thinkes) the most braue, valorous and thrice-worthy figureur of England.

Pist. As I lucke blood, I will some mercy shew. Follow mee.

Boy. Same wow le grand Capitaine? Idid neuer know so full a voyce rsue from so emptie a heart: but the faying is true. The empty vessel makes the greatest found, Bardolfe and Nym had cenne times more valout, then this roating diuell i'th olde play, that everie one may payre his nayles with a woodden dagger, and they are both hang'd, and to would this be. if hee durft feale any thing adventurously. I must stay with the Lackies with the luggage of our camp, the French might haue a good pray of vs, if he knew of it, for there is none to guard it but boyes.

Enter Constable, Orleance, Burbon, Dolph and Ramburs.

Con. O Diable.

Orl. O signeur le iour et perdia, toute et perdie.

Dol, Mer Dieu ma vie, all is confounded all,

Reproach, and everlasting shame

Sits mocking in our Plumes. A Short Alarum.

O meschante Fortune, do not sunne away.

Con. Why all our rankes are broke.

Dol, O perdurable shame, let's stab our selues: Be thefe the wretches that we plaid at dice for?

Orl. Is this the King we fent too, for his randome?

Bur. Shame, and eternall thame, nothing but shame, Let vs dye in once more backe againe, And lie that will not follow Burbon now, Lethim go hence, and with his cap in hand Like a hale Pander hold the Chamber doore, Whilst a base slaue, no gentler then my dogge, His fairest daughter is contaminated.

Can. Disorder that hath spoyl'd vs, friend vs now,

Let vs on heapes go offer vp our liues.

Orl. We are enow yet living in the Field, To forother up the English in our throngs, If any order might be thought vpon-

Bur. The diucli take Order now, Ile to the throng; Let life be short, else shane will be too long.

> Alarum. Enter the King and his trayne, with Prisoners.

King. Well haue we done thrice-valiant Countrimen, But all's not done, yet keepe the French the field. Exe. The D. of York commends him to your Maiefly

King. Lines he good Vnckle: thrice within this houre I saw him downe; thrice vp againe, and fighting, From Helmet to the spurre, all blood he was.

Exe. In which array (brane Soldier) doth he lye, Larding the plaine: and by his bloody fide, (Yoake-fellow to his honour-owing-wounds) The Noble Earle of Suffolke also lyes, Suffolke first dyed, and Yorke all hagled ouer Comes to him, where in gore he lay insteeped, And takes him by the Beard, kiffes the gafhes That bloodily did yawne vpon his face He cryes aloud; Tarry my Cosin Suffolke, My soule shall thine keepe company to heauen: Tarry (sweet soule) for mine, then flye a-brest: As in this glorious and well-foughten field We kept together in our Chiualrie. Vpon these words I came, and cheer'd him vp, He smil'd me in the face, raught me his hand, And with a feeble gripe, sayes: Deere my Lord, Commend my feruice to my Soueraigne, So dichte turne, and ouer Suffolkes necke He threw his wounded arme, and kist his lippes, And so espous'd to death, with blood he teal'd A Testament of Noble-ending-loue: The pressie and sweet manner of it forc'd Those waters from me, which I would have stop'd, But I had not so much of man in mee, And all my mother came into mine eyes, And gaue me vp to teates.

King. Iblame you not, For hearing this, I must perforce compound With mixtfull eyes, or they will issue to. Alanum But hearke what new alarum is this fame? The French have resentore'd their feater'd men: Then every fouldiour kill his Prifoners, Giue the word through.

E.is

Adus Quartus.

Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Flu. Kill the poyes and the luggage, 'Tis expressely against the Law of Armes, tis as arrant a peece of knamery marke you now, as can bee offert in your Continence now, is it not?

Gow. Tis certaine, there's not a boy left aliue, and the Cowardly Rascalls that ranne from the battsile ha' done this flaughter: besides they have burned and carried away all that was in the Kings Tent, wherefore the King most worthily hath caus'd every soldiour to cut his prisoners throat. O'tis a gallant King.

Flu. I, hee was porne at Moumenth Captaine Gower: What call you the Townes name where Alexander the pig was borne?

Gow. Alexander the Great.

Flw. Why I pray you, is not pig, great? The pig, or the grear, or the mighty, or the huge, or the magnanimous, are all one reckonings, saue the phrase is a little vatiations.

Gower. I thinke Alexander the Great was borne in Macedon, his Father was called Phillip of Macedon, as I take it.

Flm. I thinke it is in Macedon where Alexander is porne.

porne : I tell you Captaine, if you looke in the Maps of the Orld, I warrant you fall finde in the comparisons betweene Macedon & Monmouth, that the fituations looke you, is both alike. There is a River in Macedon, & there is also moreouer a River at Moumonth, it is call'd Wre at Monmonth: but it is out of my praines, what is the name of the other River: but 'tis all one, tis alike as my fingers is to my fingers, and there is Salmons in both. marke Alexanders life well, Harry of Monmonthes life is come after it indifferent well, for there is figures in all things. Alexander God knowes, and you know, in his rages, and his furies, and his wraths, and his chollers, and his moodes, and his displeasures, and his indignations, and also being a little intoxicates in his praines, did in his Ales and his angers (looke you) kill his best friend Clytus.

Gow. Our King is not like him in that, he neuer kill'd any of his friends.

Flu. It is not well done (marke you now) to take the tales out of my mouth, ere it is made and finished. I speak but in the figures, and comparisons of it: as Alexander kild his friend Clytus, being in his Ales and his Cuppes; fo also Harry Monmouth being in his right wittes, and his good indgements, turn'd away the fat Knight with the great belly doublet: he was full of selts, and gypes, and knoweries, and mockes, I have forgot his name.

Gow. Sit lobn Falftaffe.

Flu. That is he: He tell you; there is good men porne at Monmonth.

Gow. Heere comes his Maiesty.

Alarum. Enter King Harry and Burbon with prisoners. Flourish.

King. I was not angry fince I came to France, Vntill this instant. Take a Trumpet Herald, Ride thou vnto the Horsemen on youd hill: If they will fight with vs, bid them come downe, Or voyde the field: they do offend our fight. If they'l do neither, we will come to them, And make them sker away, as swift as stones Enforced from the old Assyrian slings: Besides, wee'l cut the throats of those we have, And not a man of them that we shall take, Shall tafte our mercy. Go and tell them fo. Enter Montsoy.

Exe. Here comes the Herald of the French, my Liege Glou. His eyes are humbler then they vs'd to be.

King. How now, what meanes this Herald? Knowst thou not,

That I have fin'd thefe bones of mine for ransome? Com'st thou againe for ransome?

Her. No great King: I come to thee for charitable License, That we may wander ore this bloody field, To booke our dead, and then to bury them, To fort our Nobles from our common men. For many of our Princes (woe the while) Lye drown'd and foak'd in mercenary blood: So do our vulgar drench their peafant limbes In blood of Princes, and with wounded seeds Fret fet-locke deepe in gore, and with wilde rage Yerke out their armed heeles at their dead masters, Killing them twice. O give vs leave great King, To view the field in safety, and dispose Of their dead bodies.

Kin. I tell thee truly Herold, I know not if the day be ours or no, For yet a many of your horsemen peere, And gallop ore the field.

Her. The day is yours.

Kin. Praised be God, and not our Arength for it: What is this Castle call'd that stands hard by.

Her. They call it Agincourt.

King. Then call we this the field of Agincourt,

Fought on the day of Crispin (rispianus.

Flu. Your Grandfather of famous memory (an't please your Maiesty) and your great Vncle Edward the Placke Prince of Wales, as I have road in the Chronicles, fought a most praue pattle here in France.

Kin. They did Fluellen.

Flu. Your Maietty sayes very true: If your Maiesties is remembred of it, the Welchmen did good service in a Garden where Leekes did grow, wearing Leekes in their Monmonth caps, which your Maiesty know to this houre is an honourable badge of the feruice : And I do beleeue: your Maiesty takes no scorne to weare the Leeke uppon S. Tauies day.

King. I weare it for a memorable honor: For I am Welch you know good Countriman.

Flm. All the water in Wye, cannot wash your Maie-Hies Welsh plood out of your pody, I can tell you that: God plesse it, and preserve it, as long as it pleases his Grace, and his Maielly too.

Km. Thankes good my Countrymen.

Flu, By Jeshu, I am your Maiesties Countreymon, I care not who know it: I will confesse it to all the Orld, I need not to be ashamed of your Maiesty, praised be God folong as your Maiesty is an honest man.

King. Good keepe me fo.

Enter Williams.

Our Heralds go with him, Bring me just notice of the numbers dead On both our parts. Call yonder sellow hither,

Exe. Souldier, you must come to the King.

Kin Souldier, why wear'st thou that Gloue in thy Cappe?

Will And't please your Maiesty, tis the gage of one that I should fight withall, if he be aliue.

Kin, An Englishman?

Wil. And't please your Maiesty, a Rascall that swagger'd with me last night: who if aliue, and ever dare to challenge this Glove, I have sworne to take him a boxe a'th ere: or if I can see my Gloue in his cappe, which he swore as he was a Souldier he would weare (if alive) i wil strike it out soundly.

Kin. What thinke you Captaine Fluellen, is it fit this souldier keepe his oath.

Flu. Hee is a Crauen and a Villaine else, and't please your Maiesty in my conscience.

King. It may bee, his enemy is a Gentleman of great fort quite from the answer of his degree.

Flu. Though he be as good a Tentleman as the divel is, as Lucifer and Belzebub himselfe, it is necessary (looke your Grace) that he keepe his yow and his oath: If hee bee periur'd (see you now) his reputation is as arrant a villaine and a lacke sawce, as euer his blacke shoo trodd vpon Gods ground, and his earth, in my confeience law

King. Thenkeepe thy vow firrah, when thou meet'st the fellow.

Wd. So, I wil my Liege, as I liue. King. Who seru'it thou under?

Wil.

will. Vnder Captaine Gower, my Liege.

Flu. Gower is a good Captaine, and is good knowledge and literatured in the Warres.

King. Call him hither to me, Souldier. Will. I will my Liege.

King. Here Fluellen, weare thou this fauour for me, and sticke it in thy Cappe: when Alanson and my selfe were downe together, I pluckt this Glove from his Helme: If any man challenge this, hee is a friend to Alanson, and an enemy to our Person; if thou encounter any such, apprehend him, and thou do'if me love.

Flw. Your Grace doo's me as great Honors as can be defir'd in the hearts of his Subjects: I would faine see the man, that ha's but two legges, that shall find himselfe agreefd at this Gloue; that is all : but I would faine fee it once, and please God of his grace that I might see.

King. Know'ft thou Gower?

Flu. He is my deare friend, and please you.

King. Pray thee goe feeke him, and bring him to my Tent.

Fla. I will fetch him.

King. My Lord of Warwick, and my Brother Glofter, Follow Fluellen closely at the neeles.

The Glove which I have given him for a favour, May haply purchase him a box a'th'eare. It is the Souldiers: I by bargaine should Weare it my selfe. Follow good Cousin Harmick: If that the Souldier flerke him, as I sudge By his blint bearing, he will keepe his word;

Some fodaine mischiese may attic of it:

For I docknow I luellen valiant, And toucht with Choler, hot as Gunpowder,

And quickly will returne an inferre. Follow, and see there be no harme betweene them.

Goe you with me, Vnckle of Lacter. Exennt.

Enter Gower and Williams.

Will. I warrant it is to Knight you, Captaine. Enter Flue'len.

Flu. Gods will, and his pleasure, Captaine, I beseech you now, come apace to the King: there is more good toward you peraducuture, then is in your knowledge to dreame of.

Will. Sir, know you this Gloue?

Flu. Know the Gloue? I know the Gloue is a Gloue.

Will. I know this, and that I challenge it.

Strikes him.

Flu. 'Sblud, an arrant Traytor as anyes in the Vniverfall World, or in France, or in England.

Gower. How now Sir? you Villame.

Will. Doe you thinke ile be forfworne?

Flu. Stand away Captaine Gover, I will give Treason his payment into plowes, I warrant you.

Will. I am no Traytor.

Flu. That's a Lyc in thy Throat. I charge you in his Maiesties Name apprehend him, he's a friend of the Duke Alansons.

Enter Warnick and Gloucester.

Warm. How now, how now, what's the matter? Flu. My Lord of Warwick, heere is, prayled be God for it, a most contagious Treason come to light, looke you, as you shall desire in a Summers day. Heere is his Maiestic. Enter King and Exeter. King. How now, what's the matter?

Flu. My Liege, herre is a Villaine, and a Traytor, that looke your Grace, ha's strooke the Glove which your Maiestie is take out of the Helmet of Alan-

Will. My Liege, this was my Gloue, here is the feilow of it: and he than I gaue it to in change, promis'd to weare it in his Cappe: I promis'd to strike him, if he did: I met this man with my Gloue in his Cappe, and I haue been as good as my word.

Flu. Your Maiestie heare now, sauing your Maiesties Manhood, what an arrant rafeally, beggerly, lowfie Knaue it is: I hope your Maiestie is peare me testimonie and witnesse, and will auouchment, that this is the Gloue of Alanson, that your Maiestie is give me, in your Con-Icience now.

King. Give methy Glove Souldier; Looke, heere is the fellow of it: Twas I indeed thou promifed it to strike, And thou half given me most bitter termes.

Flu. And pleate your Maiestie, let his Neck answere for it, if there is any Marshall Law in the World.

King. How can't thou make the farisfiction?

Will. All offences, my Lord, come from the neart: neuer came any from mine, that might offend your Maiestic.

King. It was our felfe thou didft abuse.

Will. Your Maiestie came not like your selfe: you appear'd to me but as a common man; witheffe the Night, your Garments, your Lowliness: and what your Highnesse suffer'd under that shape, I beseech you take it for your owne fault, and not mine: for had you beene as I tooke you for, I made no offence; therefore I befeech your Fiighneffe pardon me.

King. Here Vnckle Lxeler, all this Glove with Crownes, And give it to this fellow. Keepe it fellow, And weare it for an Honor in thy Cappe, Till I doe challenge it. Giue him the Crownes. And Captaine, you must needs be friends with him.

Ilu. by this Day and this Light, the fellow has mettell enough in his belly: Hold, there is ewelue-pence for you, and I pray you to terue God, and keepe you out of prawles and prabbles, and quarrels and diffencions, and I warrant you it is the better for you,

Will I will none of your Money.

Fig. It is with a good will: I can tell you it will ferue you to mend your shooes. come, wherefore thousa you be so pashfull, your inooes is not so good: 'tis a good filling I warrant you, or I will change it.

Enter Herauld.

King. Now Herauld, are the dead numbred? Herald. Heere is the number of the flaught'red French.

King. What Pissoners of good fort are taken, Vnckie?

Exe. Charles Duke of Orleance, Nephew to the King, Iohn Duke of Burbon, and Lord Bouchiquald: Of other Lords and Barons. Knights and Squires, Full fitteene hundred, besides common men.

King. This Note doth tell me of ten thousand French That in the field lye flame: of Princes in this number, And Nobles bearing Banners, there lye dead One hundred twentie fix: added to these, Of Knights, Esquires, and gallant Gentlemen, Eight thousand and foure hundred: of the which, Fine hundred were but yesterday dubb d Knights. So that in these ten thousand they naue lott, There are but sixteene hundred Mercenaries: The rest are Princes, Barons, Lords, Knights, Squires.

IV. vii. 156-- IV. viii. 94

And Gentlemen of bloud and qualitie. The Names of those their Nobles that Iye dead: Charles Delabreth, High Conflable of France, Inques of Chatilion, Admirall of France, The Master of the Crosse-bowes, Lord Rambures Great Master of France, the braue Six Guichard Dolphin, Iohn Duke of Alanson, Anthonie Duke of Brabant, The Brother to the Duke of Burgundie, And Edward Duke of Barr : of luftie Earles, Grandpree and Rouffie, Fauconbridge and Foyer, Beaumont and Marle, Vandemont and Lestrale. Here was a Royall fellowship of death. Where is the number of our English dead? Edward the Duke of Yorke, the Earle of Suffolke, Sir Richard Ketly, Dany Gam Esquire; None else of name: and of all other men, But fine and twentie.

O God, thy Arme was heere: And not to vs, but to thy Arme alone, Ascribe we all : when, without stratagem, But in plaine shock, and curn play of Battaile, Was ever knowne so great and little losse? On one part and on th'other, take it God, For it is none but thine.

Exet. 'Tis wonderfull.

King. Come, goe me in procession to the Village: And be it death proclaymed through out Hoaft, To boast of this, or take that prayse from God, Which is his onely.

Flu. Is it not lawfull and please your Maiestie, to tell how many is kill'd?

King. Yes Captaine: but with this acknowledgement, That God fought for vs.

Flu. Yes, my conscience, he did vs great good.

King. Doe we all hely Rights: Let there be fung Non nobis, and Te Deum, The dead with charitie enclosed in Clay: And then to Callice, and to England then, Where ne're from France arriu'd more happy men.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Chorna.

Vouchfafe to those that have not read the Story, That I may prompt them: and of such as have, I humbly pray them to admit th'excuse Of time, of numbers, and due course of things, Which cannot in their huge and proper life, Be here presented. Now we beare the King Toward Callice: Graunt him there; there seene, Heave him away vpon your winged thoughts, Athwart the Sea: Behold the English beach Pales in the flood; with Men, Wives, and Boyes, Whose shouts & claps out-voyce the deep-mouth'd Sea, Which like a mightie Whiffler fore the King, Seemes to prepare his way: So let him land. And follmaly fee him fer on to London. So (wift a pace harh Thought, that euen now You may imagine him vpon Black-Heath: Where, that his Lords defire him, to have borne His bruised Helmen and his bended Sword Before him, through the Citie: he forbids it,

Being free from vain-nesse, and selfe-glorious pride; Giving full Trophee, Signall, and Oftent, Quite from himselfe, to God. But now behold, In the quick Forge and working-house of Thought, How London doth powre out her Citizens, The Major and all his Brethren in best fort, Like to the Senatours of th'antique Rome, With the Plebeians (warming at their heeles, Goe forth and fetch their Conqu'ring Cefar in: As by a lower, but by loaning likelyhood, Were now the Generall of our gracious Empresse, As in good time he may, from Iteland comming, Bringing Rebellion broached on his Sword: How many would the peacefull Citie quit, To welcome him? much more, and much more cause, Did they this Harry. Now in London place him. As yet the lamentation of the French Inuites the King of Englands flay at home: The Emperour's comming in behalfe of France, To order peace betweene them: and omit All the occurrences, what ever chanc't, Till Harryes backe Leturne againe to France: There must we bring him; and my selfe haue play'd The interim, by remembring you'tis past. Then brooke abridgement, and your eyes advance, After your thoughts, straight backe againe to France,

Exter Eluellan and Gower.

Coxer. Nay, that s right: but why weare you your Lecke to day? S. Dames day is past.

Flu. There is occasions and causes why and wherefore in all things: I will tell you affe my friend, Captaine Gower; the rafically, scauld, beggerly, lowsie, pragging Knaue Pestoll, which you and your selfe, and all the World, know to be no petrer then a fellow, looke you now, of no merits: hee is come to me, and prings me pread and fault yesterday, looke you, and bid me eate my Leeke: it was in a place where I could not breed no contention with him; but I will be so bold as to weare it in my Cap till I see him once againe, and then I will tell him a little piece of my defires.

Enter Pistoll.

Gower. Why heere hee comes, swelling like a Turkycock.

Flu. 'Tis no matter for his swellings, nor his Turkycocks. God plesse you aunchient Pistoll: you scuruie lowfie Knaue, God plesse you.

Pift. Ha, art thou bedlam? doest thou thirst, base Troian, to have me fold up Parcas fatall Web? Hence;

I am qualmish at the smell of Leeke.

Flu. I pereech you heartily, scurule lowsie Knaue, at my defires, and my requests, and my petitions, to eate, looke you, this Leeke; because, looke you, you doe not loue it, nor your affections, and your appetites and your dugestions doo's not agree with it, I would defire you to cate it.

Post. Not for Cadwallader and all his Goats.

Flu. There is one Gost for you. Strikes him. Will you be so good, scauld Knaue, as eate it?

Pift. Base Troian, thou shalt dye.
Flw. You say very true, scauld Knaue, when Gods will is: I will desire you to live in the meane time, and eate your Victuals: come, there is sawce for it. You call'd me yesterday Mountaine-Squier, but I will make you to day a squire of low degree. I pray you fall too, if you can mocke a Lecke, you can eate a Lecke.

Com. Enough Coptaine, you have aftonisht him.

Flu. I say, I will make him eate some part of my leeke, or I will peate his pate soure dayes; bite I pray you, it is good for your greene wound, and your ploodie Coxecombe.

Poft. Must Ibite.

Fis. Yes certainly, and out of doubt and out of quefiion too, and ambiguities.

Psf. By this Leeke, I will most horribly reuenge I care and care I sweare.

Flu. Eate I pray you, will you have some more sauce to your Leeke: there is not enough Leeke to sweare by.

Piff. Quiet thy Cudgell, thou don't see I eate.

Fin. Much good do you scald knave, hearrily. Nay, pray you throw none away, the skinne is good for your broken Coxcombe; when you take occasions to see Leekes heereafter, I pray you mocke at em, that is all Pist. Good.

Flu. I, Leekes is good: hold you, there is a groat to heale your pate.

Pift. Mea groat?

٠.

Fla Yes verily, and in truth you shall take it, or I have another Leeke in my pocket, which you shall cate.

Pift. I take thy groat in carnest of reuenge.

Flu. If I owe you any thing, I will pay you in Cudgels, you shall be a Woodmonger, and buy nothing of me but cudgels: God bu'y you, and keepe you, & heale your pate. Exist

Pif. All hell shall stirre for this.

Gom. Go, go, you are a counterfeit cowardly Knaue, will you mocke at an ancient Tradition began vppon an honourable respect, and worne as a memorable Trophee of predeceated valor, and dare not anouch in your deeds any of your words. Thane seene you gleeking & galling at this Gentleman twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speake English in the native garb, he could not therefore handle an English Cudgell: you finde it otherwise, and henceforth let a Welsh correction, teach you a good English condition, fare ye well.

Pift. Doeth fortune play the huswife with menow? Newes have I that my Doll is dead i'th Spittle of a malady of France, and there my rendeuous is quite cut off: Old I do waxe, and from my wearie limbes honour is Cudgeld. Well, Baud He turne, and something leane to Cut-purse of quicke hand: To England will I steale, and there I le Geole.

Enter at one doore, King Henry, Exeter, Bedford, Warwicke, and other Lords. As another, Queene Isabel, the King, the Duke of Bourgongne, and other French.

King. Peace to this meeting, wherefore we are met; Vnto our brother France, and to our Sister Health and faire time of day: Ioy and good wishes To our most faire and Princely Cosine Katherine: And as a branch and member of this Royalty, By whom this great assembly is contriued, We do salute you Duke of Burgogne, And Princes French and Pecres health to you all.

Frs. Right ioyous are we to behold your face, Most worthy brother England, fairely met, So are you Princes (English) enery one. Quee. So happy be the Issue brother IrelandOf this good day, and of this gracious meeting,
As we are now glad to behold your eyes,
Your eyes which hitherto have borne
In them against the French that met them in their bent,
The fatall Balls of murthering Basiliskes:
The venome of such Lookes we fairely hope
Haue lost their qualitie, and that this day
Shall change all griefes and quarrels into love.

Eng. To cry Amen to that, thus we appeare. Quee. You English Princes all, I doe salute you. Burg. My dutie to you both, on equall loue. Great Kings of France and Englands.hat I haue labour'd With all my wits, my paines, and strong endeuors, To bring your most Imperial Maiesties Vnto this Barre, and Royall enterview; Your Mightinesse on both parts best can witnesse. Since then my Office hath so farre preuayl'd, That Face to Face, and Royall Eye to Eye, You have congrected: let it not difgrace me, If I demand before this Royall view, What Rub, or what Impediment there is Why that the naked, poore, and mangled Peace, Deare Nourse of Arts, Plentyes, and joyfull Births, Should not in this best Garden of the World, Our fertile France, put vp her louely Visage? Alas, free hath from France too long been chas'd, And all her Husbandry doth lye on heapes, Corrupting in it owne fertilitie. Her Vine, the merry chearer of the heart, Vipruned, dyes: her Hedges euen pleach'd, Like Prisoners wildly ouer-growne with hayre, Put forth diforder'd Twigs: her fallow Leas, The Darnell, Hemlock, and ranke Femetary, Doth root vpon; while that the Culter rulls, That should deracinate such Sauagery: The even Meade, that erft brought sweetly forth The freckled Cowflip, Burner, and greene Clouer, Wanting the Sythe, withall vncorrected, ranke s Conceives by idlenesse, and nothing teemes, But hatefull Docks, rough Thiftles, Kckfyes, Burres, Loofing both beautie and vtilitie; And all our Vineyards, Fallowes, Meades, and Hedges, Defective in their natures, grow to wildnesse. Euen so our Houses, and our selues, and Children, Haue lost, or doe not learne, for want of time, The Sciences that should become our Countrey; But grow like Sauages, as Souldiers will, That nothing doe, but meditate on Blood, To Swearing, and sterne Lookes, defus'd Attyre, And every thing that feemes vnnaturall. Which to reduce into our former fauour, You are affembled: and my speech entreats, That I may know the Let, why gentle Peace Should not expell these inconveniences, And bleffe vs with her former qualities.

Eng. If Duke of Burgonie, you would the Peace, Whose want gives growth to th'imperfections Which you have cited; you must buy that Peace With full accord to all our just demands, Whose Tenures and particular effects
You have enschedul'd briefely in your hands.

Burg. The King hath heard them: to the which, as yet There is no Answer made.

Eng. Well then: the Peace which you before so vrg'd, Lyes in his Answer.

France. I have but with a curselarie eye
O're-glanc't the Articles: Pleaseth your Grace
To appoint some of your Councell presently
To sit with vs once more, with better heed
To re-survey them; we will suddenly
Passe our accept and percentorie Answer.

England. Brother we shall. Goe Vnckle Exeter,
And Brother Clarence, and you Brother Gloucester,
Warwick, and Huntington, goe with the King,
And take with you free power, to ratisfie,
Augment, or alter, as your Wisdomes best
Shall see aduant a geable for our Dignitie,
Any thing in or out of out Demands,
And wee'le consigne thereto. Will you, faire Sister,
Goe with the Princes, or stay here with vs?

Quee. Our gracious Brother, I will goe with them: Happily a Womans Voyce may doe some good, When Articles too nicely vtg'd, be stood on.

England. Yet leave our Coufin Katherine here with vs.
She is our capitall Demand, comprised
Within the fore-ranke of our Articles.

Quee. She hath good leave. Ext

Excunt omnes.

Manet King and Katherine.

King. Faire Katherme, and most faire,
Will you vouchfase to teach a Souldier tearmes,

Such as will enter at a Ladyes eare,
And pleade his Loue-suit to her gentle heart.

Kath Your Maiestie shall mock at me, I cannot speake your England,

King. O faire Katherine, if you will love me foundly with your French heart, I will be glad to heare you confesse it brokenly with your English Tongue. Doe you like me, Kate?

Kath. Pardonne moy, I cannot tell wat is like me.
King. An Angell is like you Kate, and you are like an Angell.

Kath. Que dit il que le suis semblable a les Anges?

Lady. Our verayment (lauf voltre Grace) amis det il

Lady. Ony verayment (fauf voltre Grace) ainsi dit il.

King. I iaid so, deare Katherine, and I must not blush to fficine it.

Kath. O bon Dieu, les langues des hommes sons pleiu de tromperses.

King. What sayes she, saire one? that the tongues of men are full of deceits?

Lady. Ony, dat de tongeus of de mans is be full of deceits: dat is de Princesse.

King. The Princesse is the better English-woman: yfaith Kate, my wooing is fit for thy understanding, I am glad thou canst speake no better English, for if thou could'st, thou would'st finde me such a plaine King, that thou would'st thinke, I had sold my Farme to buy my Crowne. I know no wayes to mince it in love, but directly to say, I love you; then if you urge me farther, then to say, Doe you in faith? I weare out my suite: Give me your answer, yfaith doe, and so clap hands, and a bargaine: how say you, Lady?

Kath. Sanf voftre honeur, me understand well.

King. Marry, if you would put me to Verses, or to Dance for your lake, Kate, why you unded me: for the one I have neither words nor measure; and for the other, I have no strength in measure, yet a reasonable measure in strength. If I could winne a Lady at Leape-strogge, or by vawting into my Saddle, with my Armour on my backe; under the correction of bragging be it spoken, I should quickly leape into a Wise: Or if I might buffet for my

Loue, or bound my Horse for her tauours, I could lay on like a Butcher, and fit like a Iack an Apes, neuer off. But before God Kate, I cannot looke greenely, nor gaspe out my eloquence, nor I have no cunning in protestation; onely downe-right Oathes, which I never vie till vrg'd, nor neuer breake for vrging. If thou canst love a sellow of this temper, Kate, whose face is not worth Sunne-butning that never lookes in his Glasse, for love of any thing he fees there? let thine Eye be thy Cooke. I speake to thee plaine Souldier: If thou canst love me for this, take me? if not? to fay to thee that I shall dye, is true; but for thy loue, by the L. No: yet I loue thee too. And while thou liu'st, deare Kate, take a fellow of plaine and vincoyned Constancie, for he perforce must do thee right, because he hath not the gist to wooe in other places; for these fellowes of infinit tongue, that can ryme themselves into Ladyes fauours, they doe alwayes reason themselues out againe. What ? a speaker is but a prater, a Ryme is but a Ballad; a good Legge will fall, a stisit Backe will stoope, a blacke Beard will turne white, a curl'd Pate will grow bald, a faire Face will wither, a full Eye will wax hollow: but a good Heart, Kate, is the Sunne and the Moone, or rather the Sunne, and not the Moone; for it shines bright, and neuer changes, but keepes his course truly. If thou would have such a one, take me? and take me; take a Souldier: take a Souldier; take a King. And what fay'st thou then to my Loue? speake my faire, and fairely, I pray thee,

Kath. Is it possible dat I sould loue de ennemie of Fraunce?

Kmg. No, it is not possible you should love the Enemie of France, Kate; but in louing me, you should love the Friend of France: for I love France so well, that I will not part with a Village of it; I will have it all mine: and Kate, when France is mine, and I am yours; then yours is France, and you are mine.

Kaib. I cannot tell wat is data

King. No, Kate? I will tell thee in French, which I am fure will hang upon my tongue, like a new married Wife about her Husbands Necke, hardly to be shooke off; Is quand fur le possession de France, & quand vous aues le possession de mor. (Let mee see, what then? Saint Dennis bee my speede) Done vostre est France, & vous estes mienne. It is as easie for me, Kate, to conque the Kingdome, as to speake so much more French: I shall never move thee in French, unlesse it be to laugh at me.

Kaih. Sauf vostre honeur, le Francoie ques vous parleie, il

& melieus que l'Anglois le quel Ie parle.

King. No faith is't not, Kaie: but thy speaking of my Tongue, and I thine, most truely fallely, must needes be graunted to be much at one. But Kaie, doo'st thou understand thus much English? Canst thou love mee?

Kath. I cannot tell.

King. Can any of your Neighbours tell, Kate? Ile aske them. Come, I know thou louest me: and at night, when you come into your Closet, you'le question this Gentlewoman about me; and I know, Kate, you will to her disprayse those parts in me, that you loue with your heart: but good Kate, mocke me mercifully, the rather gentle Princesse, because I loue thee cruelly. If ever thou beest mine, Kate, as I have a saving Faith within me tells me thou thalt; I get thee with skambling, and thou must therefore needes prove a good Souldier-breeder: Shall not thou and I, betweene Saint Dennie and Saint George, compound a Boy, halse French halse English, that shall goe to Constantinople, and take the Turke by the Beard. Shall wee not? what fay it thou, my faire Flower-dc-Luce.

Kate. I doe not know dat.

King. No: 'tis hereafter to know, but now to promise: doe but now promise Kate, you will endeauour for your French part of such a Boy; and for my English moytie, take the Word of a King, and a Batcheler. How answer you, La plus belle Katherine du monde mon trescher & denin deeffe.

Kaib. Your Maiestee sue fause Frenche enough to deceiue de most sage Damosteil dat is en Fraunce.

King. Now fye vpon my falle French: by mine Honor in true English, I loue thee Kate; by which Honor, I date not sweare thou lours me, yet my blood begins to flatter me, that thou doo'st; notwithstanding the poore and vnten pering effect of my Vilage. Now beshrew my Fathers Ambition, hee was thinking of Civill Warres when hee got me, therefore was I created with a flubborne out-il-le, with an aspect of Iron, that when I come to wood Ladyes, I fright them: but in faith Kate, the elder I wax, the better I shall appeare. My comfort is, that Old Age, that ill layer up of Beautic, can doe no more spoyle upon my Face. Thou hast me, if thou hast me, at the worft; and thou shalt weare me, if thou weere me, better and better : and therefore tell me, most shire Kashering, will you have me? Put off your Maiden Blushes, auouch the Thoughts of your Heart with the Lookes of an Empresse, take me by the Hand, and say, Harry of England, I am thine: which Word thou shalt no sooner blesse mine Eare withall, but I will tell thee alowd, England is thine, Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantaginet is thine; who, though I speake it before his Face, if he be not Fellow with the best King, thou shalt finde the best King of Good-fellowes. Come your An-Iwer in broken Musick; for thy Voyce is Musick, and thy English broken: Therefore Queene of all, Katherine, breake thy minde to me in broken English; wilt thou haue me

Kath. Dat is as it shall please de Roy mon pere.

King. Nay,it will please him well, Kate; it shall please him, Kate.

Kath. Den it sall also content me.

King. Vpon that I kisse your Hand, and I call you my Queenc.

Kath. Laisse mon Szignenr, laisse, iaisse, may foy: Ie ne vene point que vous abbaisse vostre grandeus, en baisant le main d'une nostre Seigneur indignie seruiteur excuse moy. Ie vous supplie mon tref-puissant Seigneur.

King. Then I will kille your Lippes, Kate. Kath. Les Dames & Damoifels pour estre baisee denant leur nopcese il net pas le costume de Fraunce.

King. Madame, my Interpreter, what sayes shee? Lady. Dat it is not be de fashon pour le Ladies of Fraunce; I cannot tell wat is buisse en Anglish.

King. To kille.

Lady. Your Maiestee entendre bettre que moy.

King. It is not a fashion for the Maids in Fraunce to kiffe before they are marryed, would fhe fay?

Lady. Ony verayment.

King. O Kate, nice Customes curfie to great Kings. Deare Kate, you and I cannot bee confin'd within the weake Lyst of a Countreyes fashion: wee are the makers of Manners, Kate; and the libertie that followes our Places, stoppes the mouth of all finde-faults, as I will doe yours, for vpholding the nice fashion of your

Countrey, in denying me a Kisse: therefore patiently, and yeelding. You have Witch-craft in your Lippes, Kate: there is more eloquence in a Sugar touch of them, then in the Tongues of the French Councell; and they should sooner perswade Harry of England, then a generall Petition of Monarchs. Heere comes your

Enter the French Power, and the English Lords.

Burg. God saue your Maiestie, my Royall Cousin, teach you our Princesse English?

King. I would have her learne, my faire Cousin, how perfectly I loue her, and that is good English.

Burg. Is shee not apt?

King. Our Tongue is rough, Coze, and my Condition is not smooth: so that having neyther the Voyce nor the Heart of Flatterie about me, I cannot so conjure vp the Spirit of Loue in her, that hee will appeare in his true likenesse.

Burg. Pardon the franknesse of my mirth, if I answer you for that. If you would consure in her, you must make a Circle : if coniure vp Loue in her in his true likenesse, hee must appeare naked, and blinde. Can you blame her then, being a Maid, yet ros'd ouer with the Virgin Crimson of Modestie, if shee deny the apparance of a naked blinde Boy in her naked feeing felfe? It were (my Lord) a hard Condition for a Maid to configne

King. Yet they doe winke and yeeld, as Loue is blind

Burg. They are then excused, my Lord, when they fee not what they doe.

King. Then good my Lord, teach your Coulin to consent winking.

Burg. I will winke on her to confent, my Lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning: for Maides well Summer'd, and warme kept, are like Flyes at Bartholomew-tyde, blinde, though they have their eyes, and then they will endure handling, which before would not abide looking on.

King. This Morall tyes me over to Time, and a hot Summer; and so I shall eatch the Flye, your Cousin, in the latter end, and shee must be blinde to.

Burg. As Loue is my Lord, before it loues. King. It is so: and you may, some of you, thanke Loue for my blindnesse, who cannot see many a faire French Citie for one faire French Maid that stands in my

French King. Yes my Lord, you see them perspectiuely: the Cities turn'd into a Maid; for they are all gyrdled with Maiden Walls, that Warre hath en-tred.

England. Shall Kate be my Wife?

France. So please you.

England. I am content, so the Maiden Cities you talke of, may wait on her: so the Maid that stood in the way for my Wish, shall shew me the way to my Will

France. Wee have consented to all tearmes of rea-

England. Is't fo, my Lords of England? Wost. The King harh graunted every Article: His Daughter first; and in sequele, all, According to their firme proposed natures.

Exet. Onely

95

Exet. Onely he hath not yet subscribed this: Where your Maieste demands, That the King of France having any occasion to write for matter of Graunt, shall name your Highnesse in this forme, and with this addition, in French: Nostre trescher file Henry Roy d'Angleterre Heretere de Fraunce: and thus in Latine; Praclarissimus Filius noster Henricus Rex Anglia & Heres Francis.

France. Nor this I have not Brother so deny'd, But your request shall make me let it passe.

England. I pray you then, in lone and deare allyance,
Let that one Article ranke with the rest,
And thereupon give me your Daughter.

France. Take her faire Sonne, and from her blood rayse vp
Issue to me, that the contending Kingdomes
Of France and England, whose very shoares looke pale,
With enuy of each others supposesse,
Muy cease their hatred; and this deare Conjunction Plant Neighbour-hood and Christian-like accord
In their sweet Besomes: that never Warre advance
His bleeding Sword twist England and faire France.

Linds. Amen.

King. Now welcome Kate, and beare me withesse all, That here I kille her as my Soueraigne Queene.

Flourish.

Quee. God, the best maker of all Marriages, Combine your hearts in one, your Realmes in one: As Man and Wife being two, are one in lone, So be there twixt your Kingdomes such a Spoulass, That neuer may ill Office, or fell Jealousie, Which troubles of the Bed of bleffed Marriage, Thrust in betweene the Pation of these Kingdomes, To make disorce of their incorporate League: That English may as French, French Englishmen, Receise each other. God speake this Amen.

All. Amen.

King. Prepare we for our Marriage r'orrwhich day, My I ord of Burgundy wee'le take your Oath And all the Peeres, for furette of our Leagues. Then shall I sweare to Kate, and you to me, And may our Oathes well kept and prosp'rous be.

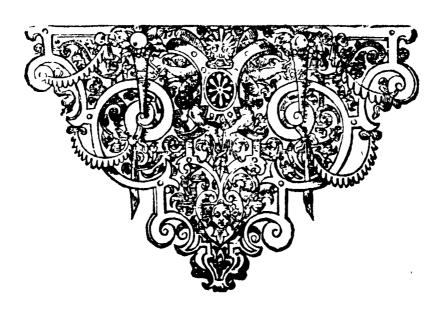

Senct.

Exeunt.

Enter Churus.

Thus farre with rough, and all-vnable Pen,
Our bending Author hath purfu'd the Story,
In little roome confining mightie men,
Mangling by starts the full course of their glory.
Small time: but in that small, most greatly hued
This Starre of England. Fortune made his Sword;
By which, the Worlds best Garden he atchieued:
And of it left his Sonne Imperiall Lord.
Henry the Sixt, in Infant Bands crown'd King
Of France and England, did this King succeed:
Whose State so many had the managing,
That they lost France, and made his England bleed:
Which oft our Stage hath snowne; and for their sake,
In your faire minds let this acceptance take.

FINIS.
